Roosevelt Gets Nomination, 1086 to 90

Convention Gives Byrd 89 Votes, Farley 1

Wallace-Truman Second-Place Fight Waits on Naming Of President

(BULLETIN)

Chicago Stadium, July 20.—The Democratic National Convention tonight nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt for a fourth term as President on the first ballot.

The vote was: For Roosevelt, 1086 votes.

For Virginia's anti-New Deal Senator Harry F. Byrd, 89.

For James A. Farley, who engineered two elections for the Chief Executive but balked at a third term, one vote.

By Edward T. Folliard

Chicago Stadium, July 20.—A noisy Democratic national convention, in which boos mingled with cheers, tonight was prepared to give President Franklin D. Roosevelt the nomination for a fourth term.

Thereafter, following the adoption of a platform, the convention was scheduled to settle the bitter fight over the vice presidential nomination. This appeared to be a battle between two men—Vice President Wallace and Senator Harry Truman of Missouri.

Two men were placed in nomination for the Presidency—Franklin D. Roosevelt and United States Senator Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia.

Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, who a few months ago sharply criticized Mr. Roosevelt in the tax-bill fight, placed him in nomination and touched off a 35-minute demonstration that saw all but four Southern delegations represented in the traditioinal parade.

Byrd Put in Nomination

Mrs. Fred Noonan, a delegate from Florida, gave the convention the name of Senator Byrd, describing him as a Democrat of the Jefferson school who felt that two terms was enough for any President. Cheers and boos swept the stadium as she spoke.

The standards of four States—Virginia, Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana—were waved aloft for Byrd, but there was no parade and no music.

The Texas delegation, divided between pro-Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt delegates, seconded the nominations of both Roosevelt and Byrd, and precipitated a quarrel that was aired from the platform.

Vice President Wallace, in a seconding speech, called President Roosevelt the "greatest liberal in American history," and won a great ovation for himself.

Big Demonstration Begins

The big demonstration for Roosevelt began a few minutes before 4 p. m. just after Senator Barkley, perspiration pouring down his face, wound up with his peroration.

The Kentuckian quoted the words of Voltaire to Helvetius: "I wholly disapprove of what you say, but will defend to the death your right to say it."

Here Barkley uttered the words that were a signal to the delegates to go into action; "because I believe in these eternal truths, and because they have been the sheet-

Detroit, July 20.—The Nats dropped their third straight to the Detroit Tigers here today, this time, 7 to 6. Rudy York and Dick Wakefield were the big guns in the Bengal attack, York driving in four runs and Wakefield clouting his third home run.

Roger Wolff was credited with the defeat and Rufe Gentry got the victory.

33 Regular Texas Delegates Quit Convention in Protest

Chicago, July 20 (AP).—Thirty-three "regular" Texas delegates walked out of the Democratic Convention tonight after Southern delegates seeking to wring party concessions to their viewpoint were defeated at every stage.

Along with the Texans, many other Southerners were sore. Some said that so far as the Roosevelt Administration is concerned, the "solid South" may be a thing of the past.

The Texas walkout, with the members singing "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You," came when the convention adopted the report of the credentials committee seating half the delegation picked by the "regular" State Democratic Convention and half that from a rival pro-fourth-term group.

Convention Vote Split

By William V. Nessly

Chicago, July 20.—The anti-Roosevelt delegation from Texas took an unexpected blow from the credentials committee of the Democratic Convention today, when it was granted only half of the State's representation and saw the other half go to the pro-Roosevelt group.

Late in the afternoon a caucus was under way in the rear of the convention stadium to determine the outcome of the upset.

It was a distinct defeat for the forces led by former Gov. Dan Moody and an equally pronounced triumph for those of Herman Jones, who had battled, apparently hopelessly, for seating of his pro-Roosevelt group.

The credentials committee, warned that it would be depriving President Roosevelt of the 23 Texas electoral votes in November, voted after an acrimonious three-hour hearing to seat both delegations and divide the State's representation, 48 convention votes, evenly between them.

Merritt H. Gibson, chairman of the State executive committee, had declared just before the vote, that "we don't want to share the representation; we want to be seated or thrown out."

Angry shouts and charges marked the hearing. Rules es-

Platform Calls For PeaceSetup Participation

Provides for Force, If Necessary; States' Rights Plea Ignored

Chicago, July 20.—The Democratic Party, in its 1944 platform presented to the convention for ratification tonight, pledged itself, if retained in power, to lead America into an association of nations to maintain permanent peace—with force of arms if necessary.

The platform ignored Southern pleas for a States' rights declaration, and its plank on the race issue did nothing to halt the course of the "Southern revolt" within the party.

Share Constitutional Rights

On the race question, the party declared:

"We believe that racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights that are guaranteed by our Constitution. Congress should exert its full constitutional power to protect those rights."

It also carried again a plank favoring the extension of the right of suffrage to the District of Columbia.

To augment international associations for world peace, the platform put the party on record for a "world free press," to facilitate free and untrammeled interchange of news among nations. The free press plank said:

"We believe in the world right of all men to write, send and publish news at uniform communication rates and without interference by governmental or private monopoly

Transport Sets London-D. C. Flight Mark

First Nonstop Trip Of 3800 Miles Made In Exactly 18 Hours

An Army transport plane made aviation history this week when it completed the first nonstop flight from London to Washington.

It was one of the longest nonstop air journeys by a land plane on record.

Announcement of the flight was made by the War Department, which said that th plane, a four-engined Douglas C-54, covered the 3800-mile route in exactly 18 hours. Veering somewhat from the normal route to make the most of favorable winds, the flight averaged a fraction over 210 mile per hour.

Normal time over the Air Transport Command route from New York to Scotland, a considerably shorter distance, is between 20 and 22 hours.

Not Seeking Record

Maj. Henry T. Meyers of Tifton, Ga., pilot of the plane, said that he did not try for a speed record but did take advantage of tail winds whenever possible. He said three hours of fuel were left when the plane touched the runway here.

Meyers and the same crew blazed a new 3200-mile air trail from India to Australia last year while carrying members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee on a war tour.

Capt. Elmer F. Smith of Clearwater, Calif., was co-pilot and Capt. Theodore Boselli of Greenville, S. C., the navigator.

Other crew members are Master Sergt. Charles A. Horton, Gravette,

Robot Bomb Raids Decrease In Intensity, Defense Stiffens

London, July 20 (U.P.).—The Nazi flying bomb offensive against England continued through the night and today, but it was reduced in its intensity and the robot missiles were fired at longer intervals.

The night-long attack was almost a respite after the salvo-like blitz of bombs which streaked across the Channel the night and day before. Apparently launched from new bases, the robot bombs came in groups in a maneuver apparently designed to get at least one of each group through aircraft and ack-ack defenses.

The night's ack-ack barrage against the buzz-bombs was formidable and at one coastal point three of the bombs were exploded in mid-air in rapid succession, shaking an area of several miles. The barrage was even more stiff during today's daylight attacks and in one inland sector many of the bombs were downed by one battery.

Watchers in one London sector reported seeing a bomb approaching from due west, the direction of the Netherlands. Others continued coming from the direction of the French coast, but most probably were launched from points inland.

British Lancaster bombers last night attacked a large flying bomb depot in limestone caves near Triverny, about 30 miles northeast of Paris. The caves, formerly used as mushroom farms, are similar to those previously attacked at St. Leu Desseret. The cave depots, the Air Ministry said, make ideal storage places for the bombs not only because of their natural shelter facilities but also because of good railway service from Germany and highways by which the bombs may be transported to launching targets.

Foe Mauled In Battle on Road to Paris

Tommies Smash Into Troarn; Yanks Also Push Ahead

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Friday), July 21 (AP).—British tanks and infantry smashed into the enemy stronghold of Troarn and threatened to cut it off from the south last night at the height of vicious, fluid fighting that has badly hauled 5 of 13 German divisions blocking the road to Paris.

In the northernmost of three drives aimed at the heart of France, the British first seized the railway station of Troarn, 8 miles east of Caen, and an infantry column struck out for St. Pair and high ground less than a mile south of Troarn.

The British beat off a counter-attack and relentlessly pressed the Germans back against the tidal marshes of the Dives River, which the enemy has flooded to block the coastal route to the great port of Le Havre.

Aim Straight at Paris

A second column pounded straight down the road to Paris and hauled up just short of Vimont, 8 miles southeast of the Orne River break through which punctuated the opening of the British offensive three days ago.

Here, on its left, tanks and infantry knocked the enemy out of Frenouville and were assaulting the stoutest German position in the entire area, an anti tank screen 6½ miles southeast of Caen, on a 2½ mile front.

The third column, spearheaded by Canadians, drove due south of Caen and captured the railway town of Bourguebus, 5 miles south of Caen, after bitter street fighting the midnight supreme headquarters communique said. The village of Soldiers was overrun en route.

Thrust Down Orne Bank

A lightning thrust down the south bank of the Orne River protecting the Allies right flank carried the British 2 miles beyond positions reported earlier yesterday to a ridge north of St. Andre-Sur-Orne, 3½ miles south of Caen.

The war bulletin said that northwest of St. Lo, United States troops on the quiescent American sector of the front had pushed to the line of the Vire River in limited advances, and had improved their positions south of St. Lo itself, apparently for an attack on the heights from which the Germans are pouring harassing fire into the ruined city.

Push Ahead in Heart Of Poland; Advance On East Prussia

London, July 20 (AP).—Russian troops smashing 32 miles through tottering German lines in the eighth major offensive in 28 days reached the central Bug River tonight only 50 miles from the big rail city of Lublin in the heart of Poland, and in the north other Soviet forces were only a two-hour march from German East Prussia.

Red army troops for the first time appeared ready to burst onto the soil of Germany proper in East Prussia, where a Moscow dispatch said "a serious panic" had developed.

South of the new front, which exploded west of Kowel, other flying Russian columns broke into the plains beyond by-passed Lwow and captured the rail junction of Rawa Ruska, only 200 miles from German Silesia and 83 miles from the last natural German defense line along the Wisla (Vistula) River.

The Red Army now has hurled perhaps more than one and one-

Hull and Patterson Warn U. S. Against Overoptimism

To Prepare Against Attack on Homeland, Spokesman Says

By George Connery

Americans should not read too much optimism into the Japanese cabinet upheaval, War and State Department heads cautioned yesterday, emphasizing a warning from one veteran Far Eastern diplomat that the enemy still is determined to "fight to the bitter end."

The replacement of Premier Tojo, they agreed, reflects Japan's desperate military situation, but the change is being made to correct this situation, not to give up in the face of it.

The group running Japan will put the toughest and most ruthless commanders in the hazardous Army and Navy posts, Acting Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson declared.

Main Forces Not Met

"Just as the local Japanese commanders have kept their men fighting until the end, we can take it for granted that the military chiefs in Tokyo will keep their empire, whose central forces have not yet been met, in battle fighting to the end."

However, he believes throwing out the "infamous Tojo" is proof the Japanese people are becoming aware of "the serious character of the defeats their forces have suffered." Patterson reminded that many in this country had predicted Japan would change the appearance of her government to put in power

Emperor Hirohito, in an unprecedented maneuver apparently designed to strengthen Japan's military rule yesterday named a general and an admiral jointly to form a new government in succession to that of the fallen Hideki Tojo.

The two chosen as "co-premiers." Gen. Kuniaki Koiso, governor general of Korea, and Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, who was premier in 1940, both have been considered outstanding proponents of Japanese expansion, and the official Japanese news agency, Domei said their task would be to strengthen the war effort of the Japanese people, apparently weakened by the series of recent defeats.

A German broadcast quoting a Tokyo military spokesman said the chief task of the new cabinet would be to "prepare a defense against the expected enemy attack on the Japanese mainland."

In Tokyo broadcasts Domei said the new regime would have a three-point program:

1. To separate the military command from administration of the state.

2. To enlist the work "of capable persons selected from among the widest possible fields in the country, with particular emphasis laid on enlisting the services of young statesmen of big caliber and strong character."

3. To "work out administrative

14 Other Area Casualties

Col. C. B. King, Lady Lewis' Son, Killed in Action in Normandy

Col. Charles B. King, whose mother, Lady Lewis, is the wife of Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times, has been reported killed in France, after previously being listed as missing. Meanwhile, six other men from the Washington area have been reported missing, another is a prisoner of war, and seven have been wounded, it was learned yesterday.

Colonel King of 3033 Woodland dr. nw., was killed in France on June 22 when the party he was leading to pick up and interrogate a group of German prisoners encountered enemy machine-gun fire. His body was not recovered for a number of days because of intense enemy activity in the area.

Missing are:

Capt. Walter F. Duke, Lightning fighter pilot with 14 enemy planes to his credit, whose wife, Mrs. Verja A. Duke, lives at 526 Underwood st. nw., missing in action in the Asiatic area.

Lieut. Charles S. Voigt, jr., whose mother, Mrs. Mary A. Voigt, lives at 4555 Grant rd. nw., missing in Europe.

Lieut. Robert L. Williamson, whose wife, Mrs. Vivian L. Williamson, lives at 107 Quaker lane, Alexandria, missing in the Mediterranean theater.

Lieut. William H. Crockett, whose father, William B. Crockett, lives at 4620 Lee Highway, Arlington, missing in the Southwest Pacific.

Baker Faces Injunction Suit In D. C. Insanitation Drive

A stiffened campaign against Washington restaurant and bakery owners who maintain dirty premises was initiated yesterday when the first Federal injunction suit against a local food dealer in the current clean-up movement was filed in District Court.

Asst. U. S. Attorney Daniel B. Maher asked through the suit that Samuel Reubenstein, owner of the New York K and R bakery, 809 4th st. sw., be restrained from manufacturing bread and pastry under insanitary conditions.

To date the only action taken against health law violators — and they have been plentiful—was imposition of a $25 or $50 fine in Municipal Court under the District laws. Failure to observe an injunction order, however, constitutes a contempt of court penalties of money-fines and imprisonment.

Reubenstein was accused of keeping flour and other raw materials for bread-making that contained adult weevils, mouse excreta, and signs of mites, silverfish, and grain beetles. Court records showed he had been fined three times since April for these health violations.

An analysis of the bakery's sugar doughnuts, pumpernickel bread, and coffee cake revealed rodent hairs, lar ae head capsules, storage insect fragments and mites, according to an affidavit attached to the suit.

Bomb Injures Fuehrer, 13 Members Of His Staff

Explosive Planted In Headquarters; 'Purge' Declared Already Begun

London (Friday), July 21 (U.P.).—Adolf Hitler, shrieking in maniac-like rage, told the German people early today in a speech that "a small clique of criminal officers" had planted a bomb which, exploding 6½ feet to his right at his headquarters, had nearly killed him and his entire staff.

Plainly implying that the most serious revolt of his career—and one engineered by his own "criminal officers"—had nearly ended his life, Hitler called on German soldiers and civilians to refuse to obey the orders of the men he called "usurpers" and said that those responsible were now being ruthlessly eliminated.

He revealed that Heinrich Himmler, his interior minister and head of his dread Gestapo, had been given special powers to deal with the emergency.

Blood Purge Indicated

It was indicated that those whom he blamed were in for a "blood purge" likely to pale that of June, 1934, when at his orders some of his closest friends and oldest followers were murdered.

Hitler named Col. Graf (Count) von Stauffenberg new chief of staff to Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian, one of Germany's leading tank experts, as the man who planted a bomb in his headquarters.

(CBS heard Reichmarshal Hermann Goering, Nazi No. 2 and commander in chief of the German air force, say that Stauffenberg acted at the order of a "miserable clique" of former generals who had been dismissed because of their "cowardly and bad leadership."

(Goering added that the officers concerned were now trying "by wrong orders to confuse the troops.")

London, July 20 (AP).—The Germans announced dramatically from Adolf Hitler's headquarters tonight that the Nazi fuehrer was singed and bruised today by high explosives set off in an attempt to kill him while many of his highest advisers were gathered around him.

Thirteen members of his personal military staff were injured, three of them seriously, German announcers said as they rushed to the radio to report guardedly on the latest attempt on Hitler's life,

General Staff Discord Seen in Hitler Attack

London (Friday), July 21 (INS), Germany's internal crisis involving a disaffected section of the general staff is "believed to have been behind the attempted assassination" of Adolf Hitler, the Daily Mail reported from Stockholm today.

The News-Chronicle, meanwhile, stated flatly that Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief, "now is in effect the dictator of Germany" and that within a few weeks "announcements will be made confirming his overriding authority in the councils of the general staff."

The Mail said Himmler had "stepped in" by Hitler's order and is assuming a "specially created post giving him control over the appointment or dismissal of high officers of the armed forces."

1939 Plot to Kill Fuehrer Recalled

War Sidelights

Battleship Hits Nazi Car At 20 Miles

The British battleship Nelson, firing at almost 20 mile range, blew an automobile load of Germans into atoms with a direct hit with a 16-inch shell.

The Nelson's commander, Capt. A. H. Maxwell-Hyslop, telling a press conference about it yesterday, said the shot was "one of the extraordinary flukes" and then added with a gain:

"I once hit a rabbit with a .22 rifle, but I never thought I would hit a motor car with a 16-inch gun."

The incident occurred while the Nelson was bombarding a Nazi fortress perched atop a 300-foot cliff near Le Havre during the early days of the Normandy campaign.

The 33,950-ton Nelson, relieving her sister ship on the fifth day of the landings, fired 230 16-inch shells and 680 6-inch shells from her secondary batteries in 20 bombardments during her stay off the coast.

Most of her targets were tank and troop concentrations well inland, with the firing directed by air observers.

Trick Gets Nazi Plane

London, July 20 (U.P.).—When the ammunition in his machine guns was exchausted after shooting down two German planes today, Lt. Sherman Armsby, 23, Baltimore, pulled a trick out of the bag to chalk up a third.

Armsby, reluctantly telling one of the tallest, true stories of the air war, said he raced toward the third German plane and squeezed the trigger bufton—but nothing happened.

"I flew alongside him and we just scowled at each other," Armsby said. "Then I spotted an embankment ahead. I flew above the German and sat down above him."

The Nazi plane was unable to rise. It crashed into the embankment and exploded.

Nazis' Flight Abroad Seen

The British Radio in a broadcast to Germany said yesterday that the Hungarian military attache in Sweden had resigned with the statement that the "Nazis let their soldiers fight to the last bullet to gain time to build an illegal post-war organization and to prepare for a flight abroad."

The War Today

By Fletcher Pratt

No officer is so adroit as General Montgomery at shifting his feet in a narrow space, making a feint and then a real attack when it does not seem possible that he has room for any maneuver. On the early returns he has done it again east of Caen and secured a notable victory; but to call it a major breakthrough or refer to it as having severed German communications along the whole front is over-optimistic.

PRATT

What communications? The Germans have been under constant air attack almost since the original landing and their rail communications in the Normandy area cannot amount to very much by this time.

Long since they have been described as moving their troops and supplies by night. The only way to stop that is to get hold of the roads by which they move or the fields across which they can be sent in an emergency and the British are nowhere near encircling the German positions yet.

Also, there appears to be plenty of good defensive ground still between Montgomery and the open area before Paris. There is a line of low hills, including the usual hedgerow country that has proved so difficult so far in Normandy, running south from Lisieux. A couple of good lines of lateral communication support this line, which makes a turn westward to Falaise, Conde and Vire. There is a slight gap near Falaise, but it is one the Germans will undoubtedly have fortified and be holding in force.

Montgomery's advance, then, has been chiefly successful in making secure the bridgehead east of the Orne and in gaining room for maneuver in that sector.

In making that advance so very much air bombardment was employed that probably, as in the case of Cassino, advancing British armor will find the ground too much cut up for really effective operation.

These are the dedurtions to be made from headline statements and the dispatches of enthusiastic correspondents who have been seeing in Normandy a deadlock from which there appeared to be no issue. The victory is nevertheless a real one. The very earliest reports speak of the Germans as once more using their armor in an effort to halt Montgomery's rush. This is a strategic gain and a very real one; ti means that once more Rommel is NOT being allowed time to build up close behind the front an armored reserve for a general counterattack; once more he is forced to employ piecemeal his most effective arm.

In addition, he will probably have to draw reinforcements from his left wing, where he has for a week been holding General Bradley's forces in unfavorable terrain under heavy losses. One step toward obtaining room for Allied maneuver has been taken.

Munich Explosion Ocurred Shortly After He Left Hall

By the United Press

Adolf Hitler escaped assassination on November 8, 1939, when a bomb exploded in the historic Buergeerbrau Hall in Munich only 11 minutes after the German dictator had left the building. The explosion killed eight persons and injured more than 60.

The hall was ringing with the cheers of Hitler's 500 "old veterans" celebrating the anniversary of their unsuccessful "march on Berlin" with the Fuehrer in 1923, when an explosion from an attic room showered the ceiling upon the Nazis below.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels blamed the British for "an obvious attempt on Hitler's life," and by November 22, the Gestapo had arrested two British agents, Sigismund Payne Best, 54, and Capt. Richard Henry Stevens, 46.

Agents Believed Killed

The agents were kidnaped from Venlo, Holland, where they had gone to investigate a fake German peace proposal. British authorities believed that Best and Stevens later were killed b ythe Gestapo.

Georg Elser, 36, a mild-mannered Munish workman, was charged with placing the bomb in the attic and allegedly confessed, linking Otto Strasser, leader of the "black front" in Paris, with the plot. Elser, it was said, intended that the bomb should explode while Hitler was speaking.

There have been other rumored attempts on Hitler's life, but not verified by Nazi sources. They included:

A Long Catalogue

A plot to kill Hitler while he was touring the Polish battlefront in 1939; a foiled shooting at the Kroll oPera House in the same year; a shooting in Vienna in 1938 in which a storm trooper was killed by mistake, and another in which Hitler's chauffeur was reported killed when he exchanged places with the Dictator.

Many persons were arrested in Copenhagen in March, 1935, when a widespread plot to assasinate Hitler and other Nazi leaders was reported uncovered, and on January 10, Ernst Niekisch, a German writer was sentenced to life imrpisonment for plotting with 20 others in another attempt to kill Hitler.

tablished and actions taken on contests by conventions as far back as 1848 were dug out in the course of the debate, and numerous suggestions for settling the fight were advanced and as quickly knocked down.

At one time the hearing had before it a resolution to seat all of the regular delegation except E. B. Germany, who has led the anti-Roosevelt drive throughout the South, and Al Buchanan, two of several charged by the pro-Roosevelt forces with having asserted they would not support President Roosevelt if he were nominated. This, however, was removed from the floor through sustitution of another which in itslef never did reach a vote.

The resolution finally agreed on was authored by Judge Luther Hamilton, of Moorehead, N. C., who first included a provision that each member of the two delegations, before being seated, would be required to file with the secretary of the convention an affirmation that he would support the nominees of the convention. This clause was withdrawn by the sponsor after a storm of criticism.

The entire contest centered on whether the regular Texans would support President Roosevelt and his running mate.

At one time Jones told the committee there would be no contest if the regulars would give such assurance.

Numerous members of the committee took the stand that the committee had no right to exact pladges of any sort from individual delegates, and spoke to that effect.

Col. Myron G. Blalock, national committeeman from Texas (he was elected to that post by both the regular and the "rump" pro-Roosevelt convention), undertook to bring about seating of the regular delegation, but was subjected to considerable fire from committee members who had indicated their approval of the "rump" delegation's cause. Blalock told the committee the interests of the party in Texas would best be served by recognizing the Moody group.

Blalock said he would attach a provision, however, that the convention itself adopt a declaration of policy covering the loyalty of persons seated as delegates.

Animosity Develops

Hardly had Jones presented the case for the "rump" delegation than it became apparent there had developed in the committee considerable animosity toward the regulars. This was due to the threats adopted by the regular State convention to withhold the State's electoral votes from the Roosevelt ticket unless the National Convention met its demands for restoration of the two-thirds nominating rule, and a declaration that the State's have control over segregation of the races in schools, public vehicles and churches.

John D. Cahill, committee member for Massachusetts, and former Gov. Robert A. Hurley of Connecticut voiced resentment of the threats brought by the Texas regulars.

"I will not be a party to accepting anyone who lays down a condition," said Hurley.

Cahill declared "The convention will not be threatened."

and that right should be protected by treaty."

Shortest in Party's History

The Democratic declaration of principles, embodied in approximately 1500 words and perhaps the shortest in the party's history, reviewed the party's 12 years of national administration, and in effect declared the party was ready to stand or fall on President Roosevelt's record.

The "peace-by-force" foreign plank declared:

"That the world may not again be drenched in blood by international outlaws and criminals, we pledeg:

"To join with the other United Nations in the establishment of an international organization based on the principles of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving States, open to membership by all such States, large and small, for the prevention of aggression and the mafntenance of international peace and security.

"To make all necessary and effective agreements and arrangements through which the nations would maintain adequate forces to meet the needs of preventing war and of making impossible the preparation for war and which would have such forces available for joint action when necessary.

"Such organization must be endowed with power to employ armed forces when necessary to prevent aggression and preserve peace.

Favor World Court

"We favor the maintenance of an international court of justice of which the United States shall be a member and the employment of diplomacy, conciliation, arbitration and other like methods of appropriat in the settlement of international disputes."

The platfor mpledged party support to the Atlantic Charter and the four freedoms—freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from ear and freedom rom want.

On domestic policy, the statement of party principles and philosophy embodied to a large degree the platform suggested by Democratic Chairman Robert E. Hannegan: "Franklin D. Roosevelt."

MacFarlane Resigns Italian Control Post

London, July 20 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Sir Noel Mason MacFarlane has resigned as chief of the Allied Control Commisison in Italy to "undergo a prolonged course of medical treatment," it was announced today.

Capt. Ellery Stone of the United States Navy has been named acting chief of the commission pending appointment of a successor to MacFarlane.

HITLER

which came amid reports of fresh quarrels among the commanders of his armies retreating on three fronts.

Berlin did not disclose where the attempt was made.

A German underground source in London, which cannot be named, suggested that a rift in the Normandy command over Marshal Erwin Rommel's demand for more troops, and Hitler's support of Marshal Guenther von Kluge's refusal, might have touched off a fight at Rommel's headquarters in Breda, Holland, similar to a recent pistolshooting quarrel among German generals in Athens. This source said Hitler was at Breda on Wednesday.

Those injured with Hitler were chiefly members of his personal military staff, as distinguished from the Junkers high command.

Among the injured listed by Berlin were:

Maj. Gen. Alfred Jodl, chief of Hitler's personal military staff.

Gen. Gunther Korten, chief of staff of the German air force. He is 46 years old and a pioneer Nazi, holding the "Blutorden" (Order of the Blood), highest Nazi Party distinction.

Lieut. Gen. Rodlf Schmundt, described by Transocean News Agency as "belonging to the closest entourage of Hitler at all military and political occasions." He took part in the pre-Munich Hitler-Chamberlain talks.

Lieutenant General Buhle, a member of Hitler's personal staff for several years.

Goering Protege

Gen. Karl Bodenschatz, chief of Goering's personal staff and a Goering protege. A 53-year-old Bavarian, he was aide de camp to Baron Richthofen in the first World War.

Generals Heusinger and Walter Scherff, of whom no deails were immediately available.

Rear Admiral von Putkammer, Hitler's naval aide de camp since 1939.

An Admiral Voss, about whom no details were avilable.

Naval Captain Assmann.

A Colonel Brandt, who may be Prof. Karl Brandt, German commissioner general for health who also was one of Hitler's personal physicians and charged with liaison between military and civilian authorities on health matters. He holds the rank of group leader in the SS, equivalent to lieutenant general in the army.

A Lieutenant Colonel Borgmann.

A "collaborator" named Berger.

Three Seriously Injured

The radio said Schmundt, Brandt, and Berger were seriously injured, and the others slightly injured.

The official German DNB agency broadcasts to the German press, on domestic programs, to the troops and on the foreign service, with some minor revisions on the identities of the injured, said:

"Special announcement: Today an attempt was made on the life of the Fuehrer with explosives.

"The Fuehrer himself suffered no injuries, except light burns and bruises. He has immediately resumed his work and, as scheduled, received Il Duce (Benito Mussolin) for a lengthy conversation. A short time after the attempt, the Reichsmarshal (Hermann Goering arrived to see the Fuehrer."

Goering Absent Both Times

The No. 2 Nazi, Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, was absent at the critical moment—just as he was in the Munich Beer-Hall bombing of November 8, 1939, in which Hitler barely escaped, and as he was during the historic Reichstag fire of 1933.

Just as on- those occasions, Goering hurried to the scene immediately afterward.

It was the second time that persons in Hitler's etourage had been injured at about the time of a meeting with Mussolini. After their last conference, the Germans announced that a General Hube and Walter Hewel, liaison man between Hitler and his foreign office, had been killed as the result of accidents.

German broadcasts in English said the attack was made "with high explosives," but did not specify a bomb, dynamite or other form.

"Concussion" Reported

(A BBC account said Hitler suffered concussion, but the German radio in English translated the word "prellungen" as "bruises," and it was likely that "concussion" was intended to mean "contusions." A person close enough to an explosion to be burned by it migh teasily suffer from concussion, however.

(The BBC also raised the possibility that a 14-hour severance of communications between Germany and Sweden Wednesday night may have been connected with the attempt against Hitler. The German broadcasts, however, said the explosion occurred Thursday.)

Interpreted as Slap

The incident followed by a few days the dismissal of Field Marshal Gen. Karl Gerd von Rundstedt from his command in the west in favor of Kluge, a shift which was interpreted abroad as a slap at the German military caste and a favor to the Nazi type of general such as Rommel.

Yesterday another old-line Junkers general, Col. Gen. Alexander von Falkenhausen, was eased from his command in Belgium and northern France.

Recently dispatches from the German frontier said the death in an airplane crash of Con. Gen. Eduard Dietl, German commander in Finland who was closely attached to Hitler, might have been the result of sabotage by a rival military clique anxious to get possession of a secret document Dietl was carrying to Hitler.

people we believed "more friendly" if the war went against her.

Can't Erase Pearl Harbor

Secretary of State Cordell Hull agreed that the Japs will put forth their best military tactics to replace those of the discredited Tojo, although no one knows for certain what will develop out of the situation in Tokyo. He commented that "the Japanese need not think that because they change their leaders we will forget what happened at Pearl Harbor."

There has been no fundamental change, the same old group is in the saddle in Tokyo, according to oJseph C. Grew, head of the State Department's office of Far Eastern affairs. Grew spent the 10 years prior to Pearl Harbor as United States Ambassador to Japan.

Sees Three Implications

Ouster of the Tojo cabinet implies three things to Grew:

1. It is the clearest possible admission of unprecedented defeats sustained by the Japanese armed forces.

2. It follows the usual Japanese pattern of accepting personal responsibility for failures.

3. It implies the necessit yof bolstering a weakened morale of the Japanese people by giving them something in the nature of a new government.

"The old do-or-die fanatical spirit is deeply engrained in the Japanese race," he said, "and it would be shortsighted and dangerous to the full prosecution of our own war effort to allow this change to lull us into any wishful thinking or false optimism."

"It is also importat to bear in mind that Tojo is only one of a group and is not a personal dictator in the European sense. The dictatorship is exercised by a group still in power. It would be short-sighted and dangerous to the full prosecution of our own war effort to allow this change to lull us into any wishful thinking or false optimism."

Traced to Saipan Blow

Chungking, July 20 (AP).—Premier Tojo's resignation is believed here to have been the result of a feeling among the Japanese people that the props under their empire were becoming insecure. Chinese hoped that a good bombing of Toyko would be staged soon to strengthen this conviction.

Chinese linked the fall of the Tojo cabinet with differences between the Japanese army and navy, particularly over the loss of Saipan. It is believed the army blamed the navy for the Saipan reverse.

No Major Changes Seen

London, July 20 (AP).Well informed opinion in London is that there will be no major change in Japanese policy as a result of the change of governments.

half million troops simultaneously against an enemy reeling on a winding 700-mile front from Latvia south to Lwow on the approaches to the Carpathian Mountains.

Lower Wing Crashes Ahead

The lower wing of Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian Army went over to the offensive three days ago west of Kowel, shattering German lines on a 94-mile front and reaching the Bug in a direct drive in Lublin and Warsaw. More than 400 towns and villages were captured on this front between imperilled Lwow and Brest Litovsk, rail junctions.

Also announced was the fall of the rail junctions of Wlodzimierz, 33 miles southwest of Kowel, and Rawa Ruska, 35 miles northwest of Lwow. The stronghold of Lwow itself was being attacked frontally by troops within sight of the citadel, and Moscow dispatches said the big hub for 10 railway running to Germany, Hungary and Czechoslovakia was doomed.

The capture of Rawa Ruska represented a 21-mile advance in 24 hours cut the German's Lublin-Lwow supply railway, and put the mobile Russians within 45 miles of Jaroslaw, another rail city on the Lwow-Krakow-Breslau trunk line only 168 miles from German Silesia.

Nazis Admit Red Gains

Berlin said Red armies in the north, attacking west of Grodno, had reached Augustow, only a two-hour march from German East Prussia. Augustow is just below the Suwalki triangle which Germany annexed to East Prussia in the 1939 partition of Poland, and is 8 miles east of the border of East Prussia proper.

Amon gthe 400 localities captured in the new offensive was Opalin, 45 miles west northwest of Kowel. Opalin is on the east bank of the Bug only 14 miles from Cheim on the Kowel-Lublin-Warsaw Railway and 50 miles due east of Lublin, which controls railways and roads radiating from the heart of Poland.

The capture of Malyorta, only 26 miles southeast of Brest Litovsk, found that lower jaw of a Russian pincers closing on Brest Litovsk, while Rokossovsky's northern wing fought just a few miles outside of Brest Litovsk on the northeast.

They'll Form Jap Cabinet

GET NOD FROM EMPEROR—Gen. Kuniaki Koiso, above, Governor General of Korea, and Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, premier in 1940, have been ordered by Emperor Hirohito to form a new Japanese cabinet to replace that of Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo, the Tokyo radio announced yesterday problems whereby the entire nation will be given full opportunity to give vent to their irresistible enthusiasm to contribute to the nation's all-out war efforts."

Tojo, Japan's dictatorial leader for 2½ years, was in total eclipse. A week ago the holder of several of the nation's top jobs, he first gave up his post of chief of the army general staff, then resigned as premier and war minister and finally, as an aftermath of the shake-up, was removed from the presidency of the imperial rule assistance association, the Japanese fascist party.

Japan's Axis partner Germany, after being silent for hours on the Tokyo shakeup, finally took this official stand, attributed to a Berlin Foreign Office spokesman and broadcast by the Berlin radio:

"Berlin welcomes the Japanese intention of forming a new government on the broadest possible basis. Military setbacks call for very intensive efforts, as is well known to Berlin."

The Japanese shake-up was far-reaching. The Tojo cabinet's resignation was followed by that of Eiji Amau, Japan's head propagandist, as chief of the Japanese information board, and half a dozen lesser officials who normally would not necessarily be ousted with a change of administration.

Japanese broadcasters continued to exhort the people to greater mobilization of manpower, more agricultural production in the "sustenance battle," and increased industrial production.

One home broadcast demanded "universal agricultural conscription" and "universal industrial conscription," saying Japan should have "a military mobilization of at least 10 million."

Flight records for the B-29s have not been made public but the longest bomber mission of the war was some 2700 miles in the Pacific.

The prewar east-west trans-Atlantic flight record was held by a German Focke-Wulf Condon which, in August, 1938, flew some 4000 miles from Berlin to New York in 25 hours and 56 minutes. Howard Hughes held the prewar west-east record, crossing from New York to Paris in July, 1938, to cover the 3300 miles in 16 hours and 35 minutes.

anchor of his faith and the guidepost of his conduct in public and in private station, I present to this assembly for the office of President of these United States the name of one who is endowed with the intellectual boldness of Thomas Jefferson, the faith and indomitable patience of Abraham Lincoln, the rugged integrity of Grover Cleveland, and the scholarly vision of Woodrow Wilson—Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Delegates hoisted their State standards and poured into the aisles to join in the traditonal parade around the stadium. The Kleig lights went on, and illuminated the lithographs of the 14 Democratic Presidents at one end of the stadium. These began with Jefferson and ended with Roosevelt.

The delegates, their placards bouncing up and down, pushed around the track while the band whooped it up with "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" and other favorites.

Some of the delegates carried placards with the words "Roosevelt and Victory" and "Roosevelt and Lasting Peace."

The Pennsylvania delegation had its own drum major and band, and a gang of screaming marchers wearing red, white and blue hats and carrying a stuffed Democratic donkey. Members of the Illinois delegation, seated in a front row, gave the donkey a victory kiss as it passed by.

They "Sit on Their Hands"

The enthusiasm never reached the delegates of Virginia, Mississippi and Louisiana. They remained in their seats, and as the dramatic critics would say, sat on their hands. The standards never moved. The Arkansas standard waved, but only briefly.

Texas bitterly divided between "regulars" and "rumps," got into the parade, and so did Georgia, Florida, Alabama, the Carolinas and other States in Dixie.

The demonstration lasted 35 minutes, petering out as the organ played, "I've Been Working on the Railroad."

Senator Barkley, mindful of his better speech against President Roosevelt in the tax-bill fight a few months ago, had brought cheers earlier with this statement:

"I have not always agreed with this man who has been honored beyond his fellows. Though recognizing his more intimate knowledge and greater responsibility, I have on occasion found myself in disagreement with him over the substance or the method of some course of action in which we were concerned. Under smilar conditions I would not feel at liberty to pursue a different course.

"Leadership Unsurpassed"

"But it is one thing to differ from a friend, though he be President, on some course of action that seems fundamental; it is quite another thing to discard a leadership unsurpassed if every equalled in the annuals of American history.

"Like all true believers in liberty, the President fights and has always fought, not doggedly for opinions, but for the right to entertain and express them.

"From time to time my views may change. In the light of broader knowledge or modified conditions, my opinions may be altered. So may his. We both fight now and have all ohr lives fohght for the right to harbor ohr opinions, to express and defend them, and to change them when convinced of error."

In the midst of the seconding speeches for Roosevelt, Mrs. Fred T. Noonan of Florida went to the rostrhm to nominate Senator Byrd. Her appearance was greeted with a few "boos" and Chairman Sam Jackson rebuked the perpetrators.

Mrs. Noonan described Senator Byrd as a great lawyer, farmer and businessman, a statesman who would lead this Nation out of the mazes on centralized government. When she said that Byrd held to the traditional notion that two terms was enough for any President, a burst of cheers came from the simon pure Southern Democrats. When Mrs. Noonan placed Byrd in nomination, there were whistles and cheers and four State standards were waved, those of Virginia, Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana. There was no music and no parade.

When Iowa was reached on the roll call, Chairman Jackson introduced Vice President Wallace, and Wallace delegates immediately broke into a three-minute demonstration.

"Not as Vice President, but as chairman of the Iowa delegation, I am deeply honored to second the nomination of the greatest living President—Franklin D. Roosevelt," said Wallace, and the delegates screamed again.

"The strength of the Democratic party has always been the strength of the people—plain people, plain people like those in this convention, ordinary people." He said the Democratic party can win "only if it is the liberal party." He called this "the most extraordinary convention in the history of the Democratic party," and Roosevelt "the greatest liberal in the history of the United States."

The Iowan called Roosevelt "the greatest liberal in this history of the United States."

"The name of Roosevelt" he said, "is reversed in the memotest corners of this earth. The name of Roosevelt is cursed only by Germans, Japs and American troglodites."

Prankish News Woman Ties Gas to Byrd Boom

CHICAGO, JULY 20.—A good antidote for people who believe Washington is confused and hectic is a trip to Chicago during convention time. Rooms, phone calls, and even the vice presidential roll is mixed up. On the room problem, a suite at the Stevens, originally assigned to Senator Byrd, was given to a Washington newswoman. Daq and night Byrd boomers annoyed her, pledging political support. Early yesterday she was awakened by raps on her door. Sure enough, another group of delegates came to see their hero. The woman, in negligee, opened the door and an embarrassed voice asked: "Is Senator Byrd in?" By this time the newswoman felt prankish, and she answered sweetly: "Why the Senator is asleep now." She later told friends, "I guess that'll fix the Byrd boom."

When Senator Barkley had kicked up his heels and threatened not to make the speech nominating Roosevelt, National Chairman Bob Hannegan told him sarcastically: "Well, Senator, I think I can get the President nominated all right." Barkley got good and mad and when Postmaster General Frank Walker and the party bosses tried hard to get him to withdraw in favor of Truman. Moreover, they hinted the President had rejected him as a running mate because of his revolt over the tax bill. Barkley followers also accuse Truman of double-crossing their man, claiming the Missouri Senator had promised to support Barkley at one time. Barkley's No. 1 braintruster is Jim Farley.

Senator Samuel Jackson, permanent convention chairman, got a bit confused yesterday when he pleaded for the convention to be "confused." He quickly corrected himself to say "Freedom of confusion." But Interior Secretary Ickes is typical of the confusion of delegates over the vice presidential race. Acting on the advice of his undersecretary, Abe Fortas and Tommy Corcoran, Ickes became the unofficial campaign manager for Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and he tried his best to get Wallace to withdraw. Icke's assistant secretary, Oscar Chapman, solicitor Fowler Harper, and other advisers warned the Secretary he was making a mistake, that Wallace was the man. Ickes came here, found no sentiment and little talk about Douglas, and he quickly repented and sent a wire to FDR forsing Wallace. Chapman and others had convinced him that a fight between Wallace and Douglas would split the liberals. But Ickes' move may be very smart. If the race is deadlocked, Wallace may throw his support to Douglas.

While the convention was in full swing Wednesday afternoon, the party bosses—Hannegan, Kelly, Ed Flynn and Frank Hague—met in a hideaway in the Blackstone Hotel. At an appointed time the phone rang and on the wire was the real boss himself—Franklin D. Roosevelt. Hannegan and Flynn talked with—FDR told him how the convention looked. The President is reported to have declared flatly and positively for Truman. Soon afterwards Frank Walker, Leo T. Crowley and other White House intimates were on the phone and buttonholing delegates with the message that it must be Truman. When it apepared yesterday that the Truman boom had hit a snag, Hannegan called another session to demand that they produce the votes.

Oil Firm Ready To Drill on Md. Eastern Shore

Salisbury, Md., July 20 (AP).—The third attempt within 30 years to find oil on Maryland's Eastern Shore will be started in the next two weeks by the Ohio Oil Co., which announced today a test well would be sunk 6 miles east of Salisbury.

The two previous attempts to find oil in the area, both of them fruitless, were under local sponsorship and were not preceded by geological and geophysical studies mad. in recent months by experts employed by Ohio Oil.

The Ohio company is one of four exploring possibilities in the area. Since its activities were disclosed last October, Standard Oil, Sun Oil, Sinclair and Pure Oil have had land men seeking leases. Pure Oil now is conducting geographical work in lower Delaware.

The test well will be sunk on the 100-acre Larry G. Hammond farm on the Mt. Herndon rd., near the Salisbury Airport, Ohio Oil officials said.

The Eastern Shore development will be placed in the company's Ohio division, a statement by the concern said.

"Future developments on the shore will depend entirely upon the results of this hole," the company continued. "Conditions of geological significance will be studied and the possibility that the hole may be dry would not necessarily cause us to abandon this area."

It is the company's first venture on the Atlantic Coast.

The cost was estimated by officials at approximately $200,000 for both exploration and test-well drilling.

Seashore Park Development Made Possible

Richmond, Va., July 20 (AP).—Future expansion and development of facilities at Seashore Estate Park is seen as a possibility following payment by the Federal Government of $131,350 for 727 acres of land adjacent to Fort Story.

William A. Wright, chairman of the State Conservation Commission, commenting yesterday on the transaction, said: "We feel satisfied that the interest of the Commonwealth has been protected and preserved. This fund in time will afford the conservation commission a great opportunity for expansion and further development of facilities of Seashore Park."

The valuation was fixed with the Federal Government and the sale had reached an agreement on appraisal, the agreement obviating the necessity of hearing the case yesterday before Federal Judge C. C. Wyche and a jury.

The tract involved is part of the land conveyed to the State Conservation Commission in 1933 by the Cape Henry Syndicate and subsequently developed as part of Seashore State Park. The General Assembly this year provided that the money received from the sale of the land be used by the commission for the park and for repurchase, if possible, of some of the land in the future. Chairman Wright indicated there was some doubt as to the commission being able to reacquire the full acreage involved.

Stauffer to Erect Va. Chemical Plant

Front Royal, Va., July 20 (AP).—Stauffer Chemical Company, with principal offices in New York, announced that it has acquired 28 acres of land at Bentonville, eight miles from Front Royal, on which to erect a $500,000 plant for the manufacture of carbon bisulphide.

Work on the main building, 40 by 200 feet, and several smaller structures, will begin next month, the announcement said, and construction should be completed within a period of six months. Brown and Matthews, of New York City, are the contractors and approximately 150 workers will be employed. About 30 employes will be used when the plant begins operation.

H. Stauffer is vice president and general manager of the Stauffer Chemical Company which has 11 other plants in Virginia, New York, Pennsylvania, Texas and Indiana. A Virginia plant is located at Roanoke.

Md. Canneries Seek 2234 More Workers

Baltimore, July 20 (AP).—Lawrence B. Fenneman, Maryland War Manpower Commission director, disclosed today that the WMC had requests from 21 canneries on the Maryland Eastern Shore for a total of 2234 workers from nearby States to relieve local labor shortages.

Five representatives of the Maryland United States Employment Service were reported recruiting the needed labor in Virginia. West Virginia and North Carolina. In addition, the WMC has arranged for representatives of various canneries that have established camps for workers on the Eastern Shore to go into the South to recruit labor directly.

AAA Bonus Spurs Md. Harvesting Of Clover Seed

College Park, Md., July 20 (AP).—Maryland farmers are expected to profit to the tune of $200,000-plus from a special appropriation passed by Congress to encourage the marketing of more clover seed.

Leonard C. Burns, State AAA vice chairman, said that the harvesting of a normal crop would bring AAA benefit payments to farmers of about $200,000, but predicted the payments would induce farmers to increase their acreage.

Maryland farmers have harvested about 37,000 acres of clover annually, Burns said, with the average seed production being 35,000 bushels.

The new AAA payments will be $3.50 for each acre of red or alsike clover harvested for seed; three and one-half cents for each pound of red clover, and two and one-half cents for each pound of alsike clover seed harvested and sold to a dealer or cleaned and tested.

Winebrenner, a Frederick, Md., resident, has been a guard at Roxbury since late last year.

Grenades Found In Mailed Parcel

Portsmouth, Va., July 20 (AP).—Effort is being made by postal inspectors in Portsmouth to locate the person who two weeks ago mailed two live hand grenades to an address in St. Louis, Mo.

According to Portsmouth Postmaster S. Frank Kirby the contents of the package were discovered when it was sent to the rewrapping bench after the parcel was loosened in handling. When opened it was found that a firing pin in one of the grenades was half cut. Army ordnance officers were called in and the grenades made harmless by them.

Kirby said it is the belief of postal authorities that some unthinking serviceman may have mailed the grenades as a souvenir to a friend or relative and not as an attempt to murder.

Virginia Flier Tells Of Allied Air Might

Winchester, Va., July 20 (Spl.)—Lieut. Bentley Kern, whose bomber was one of the first over Normandy on D-Day, and who has been awarded the Air Medal, told his father in a recent letter that it can no longer be said that our soldiers had "too little, too late."

"As we turned away from our targets, behind us were nothing but airplanes," he wrote. "I have seen a lot of ships in the air at times, but never do I expect to see again as many as I saw on that morning. As far as our eyes could see—nothing but four-engine airplanes."

Lieutenant Kern is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kern.

Polio Outbreak Closes Another Va. Boys Camp

Richmond, Va., July 20 (AP).—Another summer camp for young people has been closed for the remainderof July because of the threat of poliomyelitis, its was learned today as the State Health Department said the total number of cases reported in the State since June 1 had reached 76. Only six cases had been reported in Virginia in the five months prior to June 1.

Camp Bethel near Nace, Va., which is operated by the Church of the Brethren for its young people, will be closed until July 31 on advice of the State Health Department. The move was announced by the Rev. J. Clyde Forney, pastor of Central Church of the Brethren at Roanoke.

The closing of some other camps has been previously announced, but a health department spokesman said this afternoon that a composite report on the number which had suspended operations was not yet available.

Three new cases—one in Richmond and two in Dickenson County—today raised the total since June 1 to 76. However, Dr. H. H. Henderson, acting director of the State bureau of communicable diseases, said the two cases in Dickenson might previously have been reported and counted in the total. The names of the two were not furnished and the healtht department started a check on possible duplication.

The health department said reports of only 10 new cases in two days did not indicate any subsideence of the outbreak which has been particularly felt in counties adjacent to North Carolina. The peak is not expected until August, it was said.

Baltimore, July 20 (AP).—Eleven battalions of the Maryland State Guard, including five from Baltimore, will go into encampment Sunday at Fort Meade, for an intensive 10-day training program.

Officers will make a night march and bivouac on July 27.

July 29 will be Governor's Day, when Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, Maj. Gen. Philip Hayes, commanding general of the Third Service Command, and War Department officials will review the State Guard.

The encampment is under the direction of Brig. Gen. Dwight H. Mohr.

Union Building Home to Determine Actual Cost Now

Front Royal, Va., July 20 (AP).—Local 371, Textile Workers Union of America, began excavation yesterday for a sample residence at Front Royal to discover the actual cost of a modern, six-room house with bath and basement, under present building conditions.

Construction will be by contract ad accordance with standard CIO labor wages.

The local union men, employed by the American Viscose Corporation, have protested against the cost and rentals of houses here and their experiment in building, they say, is for the purpose of proving the justification of their protest.

Lot for location f the residence was bught by the union in the vicinity of the location of a group of houses for Viscose workers under construction by private individuals.

Baltimore, July 20 (AP).—Emanuel Gorfine, State industrial accident commission chairman, reported today that there were 87 fatalities among the 17,489 industrial accidents in which workmen were injured during the first six months of 1944.

Gorfine said that the figures indicated that there would probably be as many, if not more, accidents of this kind this year as last, the peak year on record.

In 81 of the 87 fatal cases, claims were filed and in the nonfatal accidents, 9,506 claims were registered.

'Not Practical'

Ballot Sent To Prisoner Undelivered

Richmond, Va., July 20 (AP).—A soldier-voting ballot addressed to a Virginian in a German prison camp has been returned undelivered, R. E. Wilkins, secretary of the Commonwealth, said today.

Wilkins, who is executive secretary of the War Voting Commission, said that this was the first case of this kind to come to the attention of the commission.

The secretary of the Commonwealth said he was withholding the name of the man lest the man's family be unduly alarmed over the return of the ballot.

The Office of Censorship in New York which returned the ballot, said: "This ballot, intended for a prisoner of war, is returned at the request of the War Department. If certain military information required in this ballot were furnished by the prisoner it would disclose movements of our troops overseas, aid the enemy in his conduct of war and thus prejudice military security. Transmission of this ballot to a prisoner of war is not at this time practical with military operations."

OPA Suspends 4 Gas Stations In Maryland

Baltimore, July 20 (AP).—Three Baltimore filling stations were ordere dtoday to suspend gasoline sales for the duration and a fourth was suspended for one month for use of counterfeit gasoline stamps and a short inventory.

OP ACommissioner Clifford R. Snider ordered the suspension beginning August 7 for the duration of gasoline sales at four locations of the Major Oil Service Stations, owned and operated by Frederick J. Gilman and Lillian Gilham.

They were accused of transfering over 4000 counterfeit coupons and 2300 B coupons. They did not consent to the suspension but were ordered to do so after the hearing. Previously the Gilman stations were ordered to suspend gasoline sales for the month of February.

Others who consented to the duration suspensions were Edwin F. Morris, operator of Morris Service Station, accused of transferring 569 counterfeit B2 stamps and 90 C2's, and Monnie R. Windsor, accused of being 5197 gallons short in inventory.

John Maybe, Edgemere, was suspended for one month beginning August 1. He admitted to transferring 112 counterfeit B2 and 31 C2 coupons, the OPA said.

Posse Nabs Two Escaped Convicts

Richmond, Va., July 20 (AP).—Two convicts who escaped from the road gang at Camp 26, near Trevilians, Tuesday afternoon were captured last night by a posse of prison camp guards and citizens of Louisa County.

The capture was made near Charlottesville at midnight after the posse had trailed the escaped men throughout woods in Louisa County, Dr. D. P. Edwards, assistant superintendent of convict road forces, said.

Reports received here said the convicts, Robert Morris, jr., 23, of Campbell County, and Elvin Hyles Hoke, 19, of Alleghany County, had slipped away from the road gang as it was at work on a highway in Louisa County.

Md. Property Reassessments Generally Rise

Baltimore, July 20 (AP).—Property reassessments under way in Maryland under terms of a 1943 General Assembly enactment likely will result in increased valuations generally, a State tax official reports.

Robert France, State tax commission chairman, said yesterday that an overall increase was indicated in both real and personal property valuations.

The General Assembly law provided for reassessment of one-fifth of each county every year so as to complete a cycle every five years.

Queen Annes and Montgomery Counties already had completed their work for 1944, France said.

"Some little raise" in valuations could be expected in Queen Annes County, County Chief Assessor Harry Reynolds reported, while M. Gerald Mueller, chief supervisor of assessments to the State commission, said values also had been raised in Montgomery County. Specific figures were unavailable.

"We know from past experience that the general assessment over the State is going to be higher. In some instances it is going to be substantially higher, in others just a slight increase," Mueller said.

France commented that the new valuations would be reflected in next year's tax bills, but that the full effect of the new reassessment statute would not be known until the first cycle was completed more than four years hence.

OPA to Boost Price Ceilings Of Tobacco

The Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that the 1944 crop of flue-cured tobacco will be brought under price control "in the near future" at a weighted average purchase price at auction markets of 39 cents a pound for United tobacco and 43½ cents for that tied into "hands."

Ceilings on the new crop, providing ingredients for about 53 per cent of al lcigarets made in this country, compare with a weighted average price on last year's crop of 38 cents a pound for United tobacco and 41 cents for tied.

The agency made the announcement in advance of formal issuance of the regulation "so that buyers will know what prices are to be before the opening of the first auction market July 24."

OPA said the higher prices would have no immediate effect on cigaret prices, since this year's will not be used in cigarets for two or three years. An upward adjustment of cigaret prices may be necessary eventually, an OPA spokesman said.

The wegihted average purchase price fixes no ceiling on individual purchases. Under this system, OPA explained, each purchaser's average buying price for the crop must not exceed the weighted price.

'Cobra Woman', Keith's, Just a Mite Venomous; Of Two Stage Bills

FOR THOSE WHO ADMIRE the pulchritude, periphery and probable talents of Miss Maria Montez, there is a double treat in store this week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater.

There are two of her in "Cobra Woman," a little something Universal whipped up in Technicolor to prolong the series of imaginative whimsies in which Miss Montez has been habitually costarred with on Hall and Sabu. There is only one each of Mr. Hall and Sabu in it and, as we were saying yesterday, there will be no more Sabu from this point out, since this was his last picture prior to becoming a member of the AAF.

MARIA MONTEZ

Although not up on the series as a whole, I dare say "Cobra Woman" is on a parity with, or perhaps a little ahead of, any of its predecessors. It is a fancy and fanciful extravaganza, having to do with the strange rites and customs prevalent on Cobra Island, a fictitious spot on what looks like a real ocean, where Naja, a venomous High Priestess, exercises a cruel and avaricious reign.

Her evil designs are aided and abetted by a flaming volcano that devours the victims of her wrath at convenient intervals, a live, hooded cobra, with a not-so-convincing papier mache stand-in, that flicks its fangs about with alarming impartiality, and divers and sundry bloodthirsty henchmen who perform such dirty work as remains to be done.

Over on a neighboring island, where a fair measure of civilization seems to have taken root, Tolles is about to become the bride of Ramu, when her guard is mysteriously murdered and she disappears, presumably the captive of a strange visitor to the Atoll—if that is what it was.

Hero Sees Double

It becomes Ramu's chore to follow the twain to Cobra Island and rescue his bride-to-have-been. You can imagine his amazement upon the discovery that there are two of her—one the swet creature he loves; the other, the tropical composite of Lucrezia Borgie and Lady Macbeth already reported in these dispatches.

Good thing Kado, his quiver of poison darts, and his prescient, pet chimpanzee took the trouble to stow away on Mr. Ramu's skiff, else he and Tolles would have been in one hell of a mess.

What actually happens on the screen, you'd best see for yourself,— if yonu care for that sort of thing. A great many apparently do, judging from the response of yesterday's first audience, averaging, I should say, somewhere between 10 and 14 in the mater of years.

The three stars and their supporting cast characteristically do well enough by the script Gene Lewis and Richard Brooks have extracted from an original story by W. Scott Darling. The settings are fantastically sumptuous and the Technicolor gorgeous.

Not "Identical" Twins

The dual Miss Montez looks surprisingly like Miss Montez as both twins, but she does contrive to differentiate them effectively. Besides that, as Naja, she executes a seductively squirmy snake dance, for the entertainment of the live cobra, and splashes picturesquely in the sacred pool.

Jon Hall is his usual stalwart hero, as Ramu, and Sabu is competent, as always, as his faithful protector in the squeeze. That chimp is no slouch, either, in the clutch.

The suuport is abundantly equipped with the largely unsued abilities of such as Mary Nash, Samuel S. Hinds, Moroni Olsen, Edgar Barrier, Lois Collier and Lon Chaney.

There is an undeniable audience for the likes of "Cobra Woman," but unfortunately we just happen not to belong to it.

Nonesense and Sense

If you want to see a real picture at Keith's this week, bend an eye to "Flicker Flashbacks." Here is one of those short-reel composites of "masterpieces" of the old, silent days when the cinema was in its infancy, that will knock you right out of your pew with the superb crudity of its "art."

There is a serious and sympathetic note on the bill, however, that deserves the respectful attention of every American. This is "They Fight Again," latest release in RKO-Radio's "This Is America" series, depicting the rehabilitation of the war casualties at Halloran Hospital, on Staten Island, New York. There is profound interest, pathos and inspiration in this tribute to the skill of modern medicine and surgery and the courage and faith of the men who are restored by it.

The Pathe News alone remains to complete the program.

Another judiciously assembled stage bill was arranged by Managing Director Gene Ford to augment the "bonus" war bond premiere of "Bathing Beauty," at Loew's Capitol Theater on Wednesday night. Opened with "The Star Spangled Banner" and closed with "America," it was keystoned by Evalyn Tyner's brilliant interpretation of Stuart Addinsell's "Warsaw Concerto," with full orchestral accompaniment—accorded an ovation by the capacity house—and embraced Milt Slosser's artistry on the pipe organ, Jane Slater's super-tap dancing and the cream of Vaughn Monroe's instrumental and vocal headline stage act. Altogether, a generous double entertainment value for all those bonds.

The new stage bill, which opened yesterday for the regular run of "Bathing Beauty," also is a prolific piece of pastiming. Ostensibly toplining "Bill Herson in Person," from Station WRC, the goings-on turned up Ollie O'Toole, formerly with Horace Heidt's Orchestra, as the lad who stopped the show. O'Toole's character impressions and impersonations are the best that have come along to a local tage in goodness knows when and that first srowd was quick to recognize it. Emceeing throughout, Mr. Herson also is productive of no little fun. His closing jam session, with "Three Jacks and a Joker" and most of the house orchestra, bruoght the proceedings to a smash finale. But not until the Byrnes Sisters had proved themselves agreeable singers and agile dancers; Gene Archer had scored prodigiously with his splenbaritone; Joyce Hopkins had dittoed with her coloratura soprano, and Harold Boyd and the Jigsaws had had their turn at unpacking a load of rough-and-tumble nonsense.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

HEDDA HOPPER

Runs True to Form!

Hollywood, Calif., July 20.—Gary Cooper's first independent picture will be Alan Le May's "American Cowboy," with Nunnally Johnson whipping up the script, just as he did for "Casanova Brown." . . . It's love! Betty Grable tagged along with Harry James on two weeks of one night stands. I'm wondering if Betty means it when she says she's not going back to work. It's a serious thing when screen stars have babies. In the old days, they didn't care. Nowadays it's become the vogue, but it's hard on the studios when girls don't want to continue working. I have an idea it will be different with Nancy Coleman Bolton, mother of identical twin girls. After the Whitney Bolton twins were born Nancy received an Oscar with this inscription: "For the best performance by an actress in her own production of The Bolton Twins" . . . Joan Crawford is still laughing at a preview card Charley Koerner sent her after a sneak showing of "Music in Manhattan," which features Phil Terry. Card read, "Now we know why Joan Crawford married Phil Terry. Wow!"

CLARE BOOTHE LUCE

At It Again

John Steinbeck and Jack Wagner, who wrote "Medal for Benny," are doing another story titled, "Mejicano," with Henry Ginsberg about to buy . . . A cable from Gertrude Lawrence reports she's booked for a Paris opening soon . . . Dick Powell is house hunting with a new blonde . . . George Abbott is paging Eddie Bracken for his next musical, and since Eddie conquered in "Hail the Conquering Hero," he would like to combine stage with pictures . . . Soon after Cubby Broccoli married Gloria Blondell, they moved into a duplex apartment. A neighbor upstairs looked over the balcony, saw Cubby, and called down, "Hi, there, neighbor! My name's Beet. What's yours?" "Broccoli," said Cubby. And the neighbor has never spoken to him since . . . Gloria Vanderbilt Di Cicco gave Mike Romanoff two silver pepper pots.

Talk About Invasion!

That's what Twentieth Century has done at Santa Ana air base. It has transformed a gymnasium into a sound stage, and the troupe will be shooting "Winged Victory" there for four weeks . . . Dan Duryea claims most Hollywood characters lifted themselves up by their own bootlicks. George Sanders has "Crime on My Hands" ready for a publisher . . . George Murphy turned author with a little opus, "Hollywood Handbook," telling beginners how to get under ropes instead of hanging on them in our town . . . Steve Fisher is coming out with a new one titled "Kat Loves Tony, . . . Virginia Lelmont, Mocambo cigaret girl, has done three pictures in a month at RKO but her face hasn't yet been seen. In one her shadow was used. In another her hands, in the third her voice. When are they going to put the face and body together? . . . Saw a theater ad about revival of Hedy Lamarr's "Ecstacy." Ad read: "Don't be satisfied with less. See all of America's No. 1 glamour girl."

It was funny at Metro walking through a replica of our famous Olvera st. built on the deck of the Hornet, which was built for "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo." Gave you quite a twinge. Olvera st. is just one of the local locations being used as background for "Anchors Aweigh." . . . Seen together Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra are so thin they'd make one good-sized sailor. After a scene with Kathryn Grayson, they went outside to take pictures with Johnny Broderick, well dressed and soft spoken aide of Valentino of the New York police force. Johnny did a job in San Francisco, stopped by our village for a look-see. . . . Sherman Adams of the Boston Adamses is another visitor. Also Betty Carstairs, who's been running a fleet of cargo vessels between the Bahamas and Miami, and Tallulah Bankhead arrived Monday.

Times Square Tattle

New York, July 20.—When Winston Churchill returned to England, after his visit here, he stopped off at Iceland. A guard of honor awaited him, a 2½-mile double line of men, British troops on one side, Americans on the other. Through this avenue of troops Churchill was expected to ride to headquarters, where an American military band waited . . . When the Prime Minister's plane landed, a signal was given and the band began to play the General Salute, the British equivalent of our "Hail to the Chief." The tune is about 24 bars long. But Churchill, who was expected to make the 2½-mile trip by car, decided to walk it, inspecting and chatting with the troops . . . The band wasn't told of this change in plans. They played the General Salute again and again—more than 900 times—until Churchill finally arrived.

There was only one question which each wanted to ask of the other, but both were reluctant to mention it. The Stars and Stripes quotes a German prisoner, 2-year-old Wolfgang Doman, as saying that his mother is Elizabeth Rethberg, the Metropolitan Opera singer.

Paul Gallico, who leaves this week on a tour of the European war fronts for Cosmopolitan magazine, told his friends in a farewell party at the Stork Club that he plans to follow the combat troops. "I'll be right on the heels of our fighting men," said Gallico, "but fortunately, in modern warfare the Army's heels are 200 miles long" . . . Gallico also told of the day he tried to obtain passage on the same plane which was taking John Gunther over the Andes. "Sorry, but we can't book you on the same plane," the 6 foot-3 inch 240-pound Gallico was told. "Take a good look at Gunther. He's as big as you are. We'll take one of you at a time, but not both."

Chico Marx is perplexed. His brother, Harpo, came to New York three days ago, but Chico doesn't know where to find him . . . Harpo, incidentally, disrupted a croquet game by introducing a novel device to help get his ball from behind the tree where it had rolled. Joe E. Lewis, the night-club comic, is preparing the new routines, including some parodies, with which he will return to New York in the fall. Lewis is the only entertainer who ever made a parody more popular than the original. His "Sam, You Made the Pants Too Long," now sung all over the world, was set to the tune of the now forgotten "Lord, You Made the Night Too Long" . . . Lewis once learned that Milton Berle was claiming authorship of a parody Joe was singing. When they discussed it, Berle suggested: "Let's ask my mother. Ma, who wrote it?" "You did, Miltie," Mrs. Berle said . . . "I take an oath on my brother's life that I wrote it," Berle added . . . "Your brother?" said Lewis. "Your mother's right here. Why stretch?"

He added that Cleveland, Ohio, is the big newspaper city and that its newspapermen refuse to accept enticing offers to work in New York. Bromfield then turned to his companion, Paul Palmer of Reader's Digest, and asked: "Don't you agree?" Palmer replied: "All I can say is that when I applied for my first job, on the New York World, the editor said: 'Before you can work here, try Cleveland.'"

Capt. Jerome Chodorov, co-author of "My Sister Eileen" and "Junior Miss," once wrote a column for the New York World. In commenting on the Greta Garbo movie, "Inspiration," he mentioned marked similarities between the picture and the plot of "Sappho." The author of the screen play, Gene Markey, demanded a retraction. "I'll be glad to give you a retraction," Chodorov replied, "if you can get me a newspaper job to make the retraction. Because the day after I wrote the column the New York World folded."

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

COMPANY...ONE, TWO...HALT!

The order of the day for company is to accept only two drinks from their host—and no more. Because nobody, in these days of shortage, has a lot of whiskey. So there's a gentlemen's agreement growing up among guests to go easy on the host's stock. And of course, if he offers super-precious Carstairs White Seal whiskey, only a heartless wretch would abuse that kind of liberality! So be a good fella—make the second the last!

Trailer Park Licenses Put On Yearly Basis

Arlington-Fairfax Bureau of The Post.
Arlington, Va., Tel. CH. 3239.

Trailer park operators in Fairfax County will be required to pay license fees on trailer lots on an annual instead of a monthly basis in the future. The charge was ordered in an amendment to the county trailer ordinance, adopted by the county board of supervisors.

The fee for each lot will be $5 per annum instead of 50 cents per month, and the minimum license is $25 per year, up to eight trailer lots, and $5 additional for each lot.

Another amendment requires the parks to comply with regulations of the county health department, and also excludes owners of trailers housing their employes from complying with provisions of the ordinance.

Permits to operate trailer parks were granted Mrs. Evelyn Peck Bennett, Fairview, and Kenneth E. Blunt, Belle Haven.

Donald Wilkins of Lee Boulevard Heights, was reappointed a member of the County Planning Commission for a five-year term.

The board adopted a resolution addressed to Gov. Colgate W. Darden, requesting him to approve the use of convict labor in the county this fall to aid local farmers in harvesting their crops. Convict labor was used last year. State highway officials have indicated that such labor will not be available this year, because it is needed for road work.

Chest and Welfare Directors Vote Consolidation

A plan of organization to combine the programs of the Montgomery County Community Chest and the county's Social Welfare Council which in the future will be known as the Montgomery County Community Chest-Council, has been accepted unanimously by the boards of directors of both groups, it was learned yesterday.

J. Harry Welch and Mrs. Minier Hostetler, presidents, respectively, of the two agencies, in making the announcement, said this is a real step forward in bringing the county's social financing and social planning under one administrative organization.

The Social Welfare Council is not a new agency in the county but has functioned as a planning organization for many years. Due to lack of funds, however, its plans have not always been carried out.

With the organization last summer of the County Community Chest, it is now possible, the leaders pointed out, for "sound planning and financing to go hand in hand."

The new plan was presented by a committee representing the two agencies to consider relationship between the Chest and Council. Until complete merging is accomplished the committee will continue to serve.

Serving on the committee are: Walter Elliott, William N. Morrel, Mrs. Walter B. Perry, J. Harry Welch, Dr. Dexter Bullard, Miss Ruth Bolton and Mrs. Hostetler.

Restrictions Lifted on Water In Alexandria

The Alexandria Water Co. announced yesterday that as a result of improved weather conditions, it is withdrawing restrictions recently requested to limit the use of water for lawn and garden sprinkling purposes.

A voluntary restriction on sprinkling was asked on July 7 when on the previous day the use of water reached an all-time record of 7,300,000 gallons but on July 13 soon after one of the season's heaviest rains, the company asked public cooperation in a staggered sprinkling system permitting consumers on one side of the street to alternate with their neighbor on the other side in watering on different days.

An average saving of over a million gallons a day was effected by consumers, and Howard C. Richards, manager of the company, expressed the utility's appreciation of the thoughtful consideration and assistance of its customers during the emergency. Without that cooperation, it would have been difficult to maintain adequate water service continuously to the entire territory, he pointed out.

Advising the public that further cooperation to avoid waste of water during the rest of the season can prevent an unnecessary drain on the supply of treated water at the plant, Richards declared:

"Since the summer season is not ended, the company believes it necessary, in the interest of the community generally, to urge the judicious use of water for outside sprinkling. Please do not waste water. Continued cooperation should make unnecessary any further restrictions."

Record Cherry Crop Harvested In W. Va. Area

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 20 (Spl.)—The bulk of the record 1,900-ton sour cherry crop has been picked in this area with the last of the fruit expected to be off the trees by Saturday.

Not in the history of commercial cherry-growing in Berkeley and Jefferson counties has there been such a good crop both as to quality and quantity, growers agreed.

The prices offered has been conceded the best except for 1943 when there were few cherries available. This year growers were paid 7¾ cents a pound. The crop value at this price was estimated to be between $250,000 and $300,000 for the section. Four companies bought practically the entire crop—the C. H. Musselman plant at Inwood, this county; Zero Pack and National Fruit products, both of Winchester, Va., and Sunshine Pack at Greencastle, Pr.

More Whisky for Montgomery

Montgomery County residents who for several months have been limited to the purchase of one bottle of whiskey a month at the dispensaries of the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board, beginning August 1 and until further notice will be allowed a bottle every 15 days, Beryl R. English, manager, said yesterday.

Due to the scarcity of Scotch, sales will be held to one bottle a month.

Declaring that the whisky market has improved "considerably," English announced that the county has consummated several large purchases which should afford residents "sufficient whisky for several months on the two bottles a month basis."

Only residents who present their ration books in person are sold whisky at the county's dispensaries in Bethesda, Silver Spring and Rockville.

No shortage of cordials, brandies, rums and wines is anticipated.

The suspects are James Thomas, Fremont Tate and Rubin Faust.

B. & O. Hearing Tonight

A hearing in the town offices on the proposal of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to close its freight office in Brentwood, Md., has been called for tonight at 8:30 by Mayor W. C. McVey.

The Mayor and town council appealed to the Maryland Public Service Commission to order retention of the station, on the grounds that abandonment would discourage industrial expansion in the area. The commission ordered that the closing of the station, scheduled for last Monday, be postponed pending further investigation.

Arlington Gets $9751 Check For Nurseries

Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller, regional supervisor of War Public Service for the Washington Metropolitan Area of FWA, yesterday afternoon presented Fletcher Kemp, superintendent of Arlington County schools, with a check for $9751.54, the first payment of the Federal contribution to the county of $42,847. This sum is being given by the FWA to help pay the cost of operation of the three nursery schools sponsored by the Arlington County Board of Education.

The schools, George Pickett, at Courthouse rd. and South 12th st.; the J. E. B. Stuart, at 15th and South Kent st., and the Henry G. Shirley, at 28th and South Meade sts., were opened on July 5 for children between the ages of 2 and 5 years whose mothers are employed.

Mrs. May Brown VanMeter, director of the nursey-school program, who accompanied Mrs. Miller when she made the presentation, stated that these schools are for anyone in Arlington, and are not only for these War Housing projects. Applications can be made at the schools or further information may be obtained by calling IVy 1363.

TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey . . . who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands—and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. For the straight whiskies in this blend, we selected the world's finest grains, backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, a remarkable whiskey. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¾ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream—to ¼ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

The PICK is a Mighty Weapon -

Minerals and ores—so essential for implements of war—are abundant in Montana. Thus, the miner's pick becomes a mighty weapon in our march to victory.

The pick also symbolizes the industrious and enterprising spirit of Montana's citizens. That same spirit, based on the fundamental belief that prosperity is achieved only through hard work and individual enterprise, enabled Montana's early settlers to convert a wilderness into a productive land.

Today, Montana's minerals, oil, timber, and products of ranch and farm play a tremendous part in carrying on offensive warfare. Transportation of these products to home-front and battle-front is provided by Union Pacific over "the strategic middle route" uniting Montana with the East and the Pacific Coast.

Who travels the last hundred yards to victory?

THIS "TYRANTS' WAR" is a modern war, all right, but—

The Infantry is still "Queen of Battles"—still the decisive factor in combat.

For it is the foot soldier who travels the last hundred yards to a decision.

Of course, the magnificent contribution of the Navy and of the Air Forces is absolutely essential to victory. No less vital is the assistance of the Armored and Tank Destroyer units and the Engineers. And the Infantry could not continue to fight but for the Technical and Supply Services which are ever on hand to provide supplies and communications, and to care for the wounded.

But the great goal of the other Arms and Services is to bring the Infantryman to a position from which he may advance to hand-to-hand combat with the enemy.

Advancing across that last hundred yards of shell-torn field is the supreme test of battle. Generally it follows a nerve-wracking inching forward under enemy fire, under cover of the supporting fire of artillery, of the Air Forces, and of the heavy weapons of the regiment.

But as the Infantryman approaches the enemy lines, all this supporting fire must be lifted. He is "on his own." There is nothing in front of the front line of the Infantry except the enemy. Then the outcome rests entirely on the effectiveness of his own individual weapons—the rifle, the bayonet, the carbine, the hand grenade. And, most important of all, on the doughboy's courage and skill.

When you read the newspapers or listen to radio news broadcasts which tell of the capture of an enemy position, salute the foot soldier—the Infantryman who bears the responsibility for the final decision—the decision of Victory.

Climbing Out

Washington has been climbing out of the pit of ill health and unnecessary loss of life ever since 1935. At that time the city's record of life saving came close to being the poorest to be found among the metropolises of this country. But it has made substantial progress and is now beginning to rank among the healthier cities in some respects. The improvement has been particularly notable in our falling death rate from tuberculosis, thanks to the diligent efforts of Health Officer Ruhland and Dr. Coulter, chief of the Tuberculosis Control Bureau.

In a survey of 11 large cities, Washington stands second only to Kansas City in the control of tuberculosis among white residents. It is fifth on the list insofar as control of tuberculosis among Negroes is concerned. Of course, the record of 158 Negro deaths from TB for every 100,000 population is still a disgrace. It is more than five times the rate for non-Negro residents of the Capital. While there are some indications that colored people are more vulnerable than white to this plague, most of this shocking difference in death rates may be attributed to the poorer living conditions of the average Negro family. Tuberculosis is notoriously a disease of the slums. We may reasonably assume that the improvement made to date is small compared to what can be done if the city ever gets around to a comprehensive attack on its substandard living conditions.

Considering the absence of heavy industry here, Washington ought to top the list of large cities in the prevention and cure of tuberculosis. Indeed, it should be a model of general good health—an inspiration for the entire country. The District can attain that position in the postwar years, but it will require a vigorous attack on the slums and far more attention to the health of Government employes than is now given.

Speaking Of Age

Governor Kerr of Oklahoma wasted a lot of time in his keynote speech refuting what Governor Dewey did not say in his speech of acceptance about "tired old men" in public office. Governor Dewey did not suggest that the President or the dynamic leaders of our fighting men who have passed the three-score mark have been incapacitated by age. What he did say was that the Administration had "grown old in office" and had become "tired and quarrelsome." In other words, he was asserting that the vigor and the semblance of unity that marked the youth of the New Deal had departed. The truth of that charge obviously does not depend upon the age of the men who surround the President.

It is greatly to be hoped that campaign orators will spend no time debating this sterile issue of youth versus age in public office. Protest as we may, years are a handicap even to the energetic older men who are playing a dominant role today in world affairs. But it is impossible to say just when the experience that enhances a man's value in office ceases to outweigh the disabilities of advancing years. The dividing line is not the same for any two men, and the public must be the judge of performance. On the other hand, it is nonsense to talk about the "youth" of Governor Dewey as if it were a liability for a man to be in the prime of life—just over 40. He is not youthful judged by the span of man's working life, and he is not even youthful in the sense of being new to political life and administrative responsibilities. On the contrary, his experience of public life puts him in the class with veterans many years his senior. Raising the issue of age in this campaign merely serves to distract attention from the major issues of foreign and domestic policy that are the proper concern of voters.

Brazil Takes Part

Our good neighbor and warm friend, the United States of Brazil, has been a fighting ally for a long time. Her warships and planes have done a splendid job in helping rid the south Atlantic of the U-boat menace. In addition, Brazil has made a notable contribution to the cause of the United Nations by providing invaluable airfields from which our transports, bombers and fighter planes could take off for Africa and by supplying the Allies with important raw materials and foodstuffs.

Brazil has now gone a step further. A Brazilian Expeditionary Force has landed in Italy to participate with American, British, French, Polish, New Zealand, Indian and Italian troops in the great task of ridding the peninsula of Germans. The size of this expeditionary force has not been revealed. But, whether small or large, its arrival is a heartening demonstration of solidarity which will greatly be appreciated in Washington, London and other Allied capitals.

Tojo's Shoes

The resignation of Tojo as the Premier and pooh-bah of Japan's government is another move in the peace offensive which the Japanese have been waging since El Alamein. El Alamein ended Nazi hopes of victory, and in no capital was the sign registered more decisively than in Tokyo. Tojo, fire-eater though he is, immediately ordered a sweeping reorganization of his cabinet. His object was to take advantage of any chance of a negotiated peace that might be offered in the course of a relentless prosecution of war. This was obvious from his appointment of Mamoru Shigemitsu as Minister for Foreign Affairs. Shigemitsu is both a pacifist and an anti-imperialist, and he accepted the portfolio as a salvage job. While Tojo was fighting on the war front, Shigemitsu was fighting on the peace front. Both have failed, and the new cabinet is bound to be the beginning of a series of changes intended to help Japan get out of the war without too much loss. That is why the two leading figures in it are described as "liberals" and as "friends" of the United States. They had no such reputation before the war, as Shigemitsu had. In contrast to megalomaniacs of the type of Tojo, they are more properly described as realists, and, actually, Gen. Kuniaki Koiso was so described by the Japanese themselves when he served as the administrative brains of the war department.

In the gentle art of "waging peace," as in so many innovations of modern warmaking, Japan is no imitator. On the contrary, she is a pioneer. Her record in this respect is as eloquent as her record in making war without the formality of declaring it beforehand. In the last war she was so disloyal to the Allied cause that several times, when German chances seemed bright, she started informal discussions with her German enemy. The need to speed up the peace offensive in this war was demonstrated by the superb exploit of our Pacific forces in establishing a foothold inside Japan's inner perimeter at Saipan. This must have caused a profound shock to run through Japan's war machine. Here was an island composed of steep cliffs, deep ravines, giddy precipices and hundreds of caves that was seemingly impregnable. If Saipan could not hold out, no Japanese possession can, not even Japan itself. The shock must have been the more profound because of the relatively high take of prisoners. Japan's higherups know from this loss of territory and from this evidence of a waning of the Banzai spirit that the game is up. It is the new task, as it is Germany's, to try, along the route of the peace offensive, to pull a diplomatic victory out of the jaws of military defeat.

Accordingly this country must now be on the alert against the new peace warriors who have been installed in Tokyo. Fanaticism is giving place to guile, in high places no less than on the field of battle. The Japanese might offer to get out of the Philippines. They might even order the suicide of the men responsible for Pearl Harbor by way of feigning expiation. This might sound outlandish, but we must not forget that in Japan we are dealing with a nation whose ways are so dark that no ruse is impossible. It is difficult to conceive of any peace maneuver, no matter how seemingly sincere, that would deceive more than a fragment of our population. But we must be prepared for it. Nothing but the complete crushing of Japanese militarism can precede peace in the Pacific. Defeat must be brought home in the literal sense to the people of Japan. The determination of our Navy (with whom we commiserate in the loss of an avatar of Dai Nippon) to bring Japan to her knees will not be shaken by the stepping down of the saber-rattling Tojo.

CIO At Chicago

Reports from Chicago indicate that the CIO Political Action Committee is playing a decisive role in the selection of a candidate for the Vice Presidency. Vice President Wallace's chances have been greatly strengthened by CIO support, while the burgeoning hopes of "Assistant President" James F. Byrnes have allegedly been crushed by CIO dislike of his labor record. So even if the CIO's Political Action Committee fails to put over the man of its choice, it can properly claim credit for a negative victory in the contest being waged outside convention halls over the Vice Presidency.

However, the CIO leaders would do well to minimize the importance of their victories at Chicago, for public opinion polls indicate that the American people resent the intrusion of a labor organization into politics for the purpose of influencing the selection of candidates for office. Ephemeral political victories won by labor leaders through bringing pressure to bear upon timorous politicians may turn out to have been dearly bought if the American people should suddenly sense the threat to our party system of government from this sort of interference. It is the more menacing because it operates from without instead of from within regular party organizations.

If workers choose to form a labor party for the attainment of specified ends, that is their right. Similar rights are open to any organized group so long as its political aims are legitimate. If labor leaders wish to stimulate political discussion among their members as a means of making them more intelligent, discriminating voters, that, too, is permissible. It is a very different matter, however, when the heads of a labor organization try to influence the actions of a political party with which they have no formal affiliations. In such case they grasp at political power without accepting political responsibility. They base their demands, moreover, on the existence of a labor group, not politically organized, for which they are not, therefore, entitled to speak. Any party submitting tamely to this kind of dictatorship from without is bound eventually to fall into disrepute. For most Americans believe that political parties should represent a cross section of all the people and not be a mouthpiece for any class or special interest groups.

The United States has been exceptional in having a form of government by parties that is not based on class distinctions. That type of truly representative party government cannot long endure unless party leaders have the strength to resist the pull of disintegrating forces that seek to traffic in votes by selling influence.

Hitler's Number

The attempt to bump off Hitler occurred at a time when evidence is accumulating of military resentment with Hitler as supreme strategist. No one will disaparage the marvelous part played by the Red army in putting the German hosts to rout on the Eastern Front. But some of the credit, apparently, stems from the activity of that intuitive military genius, Corpl. Adolf Hitler. We have it on the testimony of at least one high-ranking German officer, Lieut. Gen. Edmund Hoffmeister, commander of the Forty-first German Tank Corps, that one of the prime reasons for the Wehrmacht's debacle on the Eastern Front was Hitler's insistence that his plan of strategy be carried out.

In a statement he made after his capture by the Russians, General Hoffmeister revealed that his unit was annihilated because of Hitler's order prohibiting any retreat or withdrawal. In other words, instead of learning anything from the lesson of Stalingrad, Hitler has merely been repeating his mistakes. A large-scale strategic retreat at a certain point in the fighting in Russia during the past six months would have enabled Germany to shorten her lines, economize on manpower, and avoid heavy casualties. But Hitler was not prepared to admit failure by sanctioning such a retreat. The result has been catastrophic. Not only has the German army on the Eastern Front been whittled down but, according to General Hoffmeister, great disaffection has developed among the rank and file, particularly among the older officers. This has been reflected, among other things, in a disproportionate number of German generals among the prisoners taken by the Russians. It is also reflected, of course, in the circumstance that General Hoffmeister himself allowed himself to be quoted by the Russian press in a manner so violently critical of his erstwhile Fuehrer.

Hoffmeister is not the first to have done so. He will not be the last. As long as Germany was victorious, the German military leaders were willing to obey Hitler and even follow the promptings of his intuition. Now that the tide is moving so swiftly and so relentlessly against the Reich, it hurts their professional pride to be saddled with egregious blunders of strategy for which Hitler himself is primarily responsible. The disaffection is spreading. The attempt on Hitler's life is an ominous reminder of just that fact.

Leghorn

The capture of Leghorn, third largest Italian port, by Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army, is the most important Allied victory in the Italian campaign since the fall of Rome. It is not yet clear whether the Germans, before being driven out, were able to do much destruction at Leghorn. But past experience is warrant for thinking that whatever the enemy may have done, the port will speedily be put into shape. It should then be possible for the Allies to move supplies by sea to the present Italian battle zone—a great advantage, since Leghorn is somewhat less than 300 miles north of Naples.

The capture of Leghorn was no isolated event. Just prior to its fall Polish troops of the Eighth Army captured the harbor of Ancona on Italy's east coast, while other Eighth Army troops moved into Arezzo. Thus a relative stalemate on the Italian Front has been broken. Now the Allies are in a position to push forward toward the so-called Gothic Line which the Germans have feverishly been building as a possible barrier to an Allied advance to the Po Valley.

This line, stretching from Pisa to Rimini by way of Florence, has certain natural advantages. But whether the Germans, in their weakened condition, have the force adequately to man it is by no means certain. Indeed, the stubborn defense the enemy put up at Arezzo suggests that Marshal Kesselring was willing to make great sacrifices to secure sufficient time to strengthen the Gothic Line.

PASTURE SPRING

Grasses stay green here all winter under ice.
In spring the cattail spears rise up like knives,
and moss and lichen spread over the rock basin.
Now in the season's peak the green frogs sit and raise their onyx eyes up from the water, and darning needles skim over and back, and settle.

Here in late afternoon the sheep come in a long line and touch their lips to the cool water, and drink daintily and stand content a while.
And later yet the cows sink their warm mouths deep, and lift them dripping, and run their tongues over their nostrils and stretch their necks.

Shadows cross the fences and cover the hill flanks, and the far valley side holds all the sun's light like a bowl filled to the edge with fresh cream.

Washington Calling

Labor And Democrats

Chicago.

A SIGNIFICANT cross current in this curious convention comes out of the conflict between the new labor politicians and the Democratic regulars.

Organized labor, and particularly the CIO, wants to make its strength known. The professional politicians who must do the spade work in the campaign are well aware that they need labor's full support. But they would like to have labor come in as a silent partner.

Chairman Hannegan and the men he works with through the country are afraid of the amateurishness of men like Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, which has now been converted into the National Citizens' Political Action Committee.

THEY FEAR too that, with Hillman throwing his weight about publicly, the labor left-wing tag will be fixed on the Democratic party too firmly for comfort. When Hillman announced formation of his committee and the fact that $700,000 was available for the reelection of Roosevelt, the professionals groaned.

"You just don't boast about that sort of thing," they protested to Hillman.

He is not inclined to listen to their protests. Head of the powful Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America since 1914, Hillman is accustomed to having his own way. His somewhat high-handed approach to national politics often leaves resentment behind.

A big luncheon rally was held not long ago at Denver. Liberal farm and all the labor groups were gathered together. Entering at the last minute with his entourage, Hillman proceeded to tell these Westerners what their course should be in the coming campaign. Then he departed, leaving behind something less than enthusiasm.

HILLMAN'S TEMPERAMENT is not adapted to the give and take of national politics, just as it was not adapted to the inevitable compromises of wartime Washington. Teamed up with Lieut. Gen. William Knudsen in an early phase of war production. Hillman soon went back to his union.

At his big press conference here, however, he showed remarkable self-restraint. The politicos, who were trying behind the scenes to chart the course of the convention, feared an anonuncement that, as a second choice, the CIO would turn from Vice President Wallace to Senator Truman. This would have opened the way to opposition charges that labor was dictating what the delegates should do.

The dictation charge is, of course, silly. The CIO is apparently taking Roosevelt in blind faith. If any promises or pledges have been exacted, they are a deep secret. This has caused a certain restiveness among some laborites, who insist that labor should have bargained for its support, exacting specific pledges from FDR.

The Democratic platform may give labor something tangible, although platform pledges mean little. Certainly there is next to nothing for labor to cling to in the Republican document.

Between the new labor wing and the regular wing of the party a natural jealousy enters in. The CIO, like the camel in the fable, has its nose under the Democratic tent. Party professionals are fearful of being crowded into the background.

IN THE finagling that went on over the Vice Presidency, the professionals were anxious to drop Wallace in a nice big parachute that would let him down without a bump. Therefore they resented it when Phil Murray, in his scotch burr, forced the Pennsylvania delegation to say yes or no on the Wallace question.

Rivalry and suspicion existing between the two wings will undoubtedly be a factor in the coming campaign. Some sort of working arrangement will bridge over the gulf, but it can hardly reconcile two such radically different ways of looking at politics.

The labor crowd believe in the attack direct. The regulars think that finesse is necessary to bring in voters of every shade of opinion. That is the lesson of experience they're trying to impress on their new brethern.

Roosevelt's Part

By Ernest Lindley

Nominating A Vice President

Chicago.

MOST OF THE hard feeling engendered by the struggle over the Democratic vice presidential nomination is due to the round-about manner in which the business was handled.

During the weeks immediately preceding the convention the President's preference for the renomination of Wallace was sharply challenged by some of his most trusted political advisers—men whose loyalty to him was beyond question, who sincerely believed that Wallace would cost the ticket votes. The President's own professed belief that Wallace would not lose votes may have been shaken. Certainly, he became convinced that it would be politically unwise for him to insist upon Wallace's renomination.

Yet he could not bring himself to ask Wallace to withdraw. Intermediaries sought to convince Wallace that he should step aside. But any man who has been as close to Roosevelt as Wallace should not be expected to listen to intermediaries. He was entitled to a direct and frank expression from Roosevelt himself.

The upshot was that Roosevelt offered to help Wallace, without insisting upon his renomination. His letter spoke for itself. It was so left-handed that it helped Wallace only to the extent that it aroused sympathy for him.

ROOSEVELT, MEANWHILE, had discussed with certain of his trusted political advisers—Hannegan, Edward J. Flynn, Frank C. Walker and a few others—the pros and cons of various other potential vice presidential nominees. The men went to Chicago with a fairly clear idea of Roosevelt's views, or perhaps rather of the net result of his views mingled with theirs. Their purpose was to find the nominee who would hurt his own chances of reelection the least. They were much less interested than he in the qualifications of the man to succeed to the Presidency. Their attitude was simply that of seasoned politicians, devoted to Roosevelt but foreseeing the dangers of a very close election.

Some of the men who were highly qualified by ability—such as James P. Byrnes—bore certain political handicaps. In the opinions of some of Roosevelt's advisers these were not really serious. But others feared they might be great enough to make the difference in a hair-line election. They were unwilling to take the chance.

An important Roosevelt adviser sought to convince Byrnes that his entry into the contest would be a mistake, but the President himself made no such plea. Byrnes entered the race, apparently convinced that the President's intervention would cease with the Wallace letter and that if he could get the delegates he could have the nomination.

WHEN ROOSEVELT, having said he himself would vote for Wallace if he were a delegate, declared that the choice was one for the convention to make, it was naturally assumed that he meant by the delegates, or at least by a representative cross-section of State leaders. But by Tuesday night it was evident that the decision was being made by Hannegan, Flynn and a few other Roosevelt lieutenants, and that they could muster the aid of the President in behalf of their choice, which was Senator Truman. Indeed, the circumstances indicated that the decision to move to Truman had been made at least half-way before any of them came to Chicago. (They know that the President preferred Douglas, but some of them regarded him as more likely than Truman to be a political handicap.)

A good deal of hard feeling could have been averted if a firm decision had been made a week or ten days ahead of the convention and all cards had been laid on the table. Various subtle explanations have been suggested—some of them implying that Roosevelt was quite astute. They are not convincing. I think the trouble was that he could not bring himself to talk with complete candor to Wallace, Byrnes and some others who are close to him. Maybe it should be attributed to a kind heart. Anyway, it was not the work of a master politician.

Filipino Government

I have before me the article, "United States Faces Headache When Reestablishing Filipino Government," which appeared in your issue of July 16. I believe the article contains a statement in reference to President Quezon and Vice President Osmena which is wholly unwarranted.

The Department of the Interior is the statutory office which supervises the civil affairs of the Philippine Islands, and certainly it does not believe that the officers of the Commonwealth were taken "away from the Philippines for fear they would play the Japanese game." On the contrary, the purpose of their removal from the Philippines was twofold: to maintain the Commonwealth government in fact as well as theory and to protect their persons from the cruelty of the enemy which would have been visited upon them as a consequence of their steadfast loyalty to the United States and to the Commonwealth.

Acting Secretary of the Interior.

Women Smokers

If there is anyone to be chastised for being inconsiderate of other people as regards smoking, the women of America deserve the severest dose of it. They have no respect for anyone's feelings or condition. They are so weak to resist the call of the smelly weed that they will defy anyone who tells them that in a non-smoking car it is a violation of the rule to smoke.

I therefore disagree with Marion M. Chester who is complaining in your today's issue about cigar smokers. I am a confirmed anti-smoker, and am frequently at loggerheads while traveling on trains, especially on the Pennsylvania trains where the conductors seldom take the trouble to care for the comfort of passengers by enforcing the non-smoking rules in non-smoking cars. My fights are usually with women, since no man will ever object to being reminded that if he wishes to smoke he better go to a smoking car. Clearly, our women have lost all sense of proportion, all sense of regard for the fellow-man when it comes to satisfying that silly yearning for the smelly weed. It would be well for Miss Chester to do some preaching to her own sex before criticizing cigar smokers.

Shorn Collaborators

Your portrayal of the shearing of Frenchwomen in the streets of Cherbourg is not only revolting to the popular concept of French chivalry but leads one to inquire whether American blood is being spilled for these people merely to subject them to the vindictiveness of mob violence.

Let the French mobsters don a uniform and vent their wrath on the oppressors who were responsible for the situation in which these women found themselves and leave the dispensation of justice to the courts that are supposed to exist in a liberated country.

"Bolting" Electors

Drew Pearson has a strange tale in this morning's Post about the number of cases in which presidential electors "bolted the wishes of the people of their State and voted as they pleased." The real strangeness of the tale is in the fact that such an experienced political writer as Mr. Pearson should get himself out on a limb with such an erroneous interpretation of his facts. He implies that a number of electors have disregarded the obligations imposed on them by the customs of our electoral system. What his cases really prove is that queer things happen even when the electors do (and because of the fact that they uniformly do) vote the way they have pledged themselves to vote.

I haven't checked up on all of the instances Mr. Pearson cites, but I think there has been no real disregard of an elector's pledge since such pledges became a fully recognized condition more than a century ago. Or if any exceptions can be truly alleged, they are rather to be found in two occasions which Mr. Pearson does not happen to mention—when one elector in 1820 bolted the otherwise unanimous vote for Monroe in the "Era of Good Feeling," and when the electors pledged to Greeley in 1872 scattered their vote because their candidate died between the casting of the popular and the final votes.

Several instances are cited in which the electoral vote of a State was split, with the implication that this was "for no particular reason" or that it "ignored the will of the people." Unless there happens to be in Mr. Pearson's list a stray case of electors chosen by districts instead of wholly on State-wide ticket, the "particular reason" is the closeness of the vote. While most voters vote the list of electors en bloc, some electors on the ticket will get a few stray votes more than others of the same party. In an extremely close vote some of the top men of both of the two top parties will be elected. Each elector so chosen then votes as originally pledged, and is under no obligation to ditch his own supporters and vote the other way in case the other party has a slight edge in the maximum State-wide popular vote.

Mr. Pearson is also quite unhistorical in inferring that near-revolutionary consequences in two famous disputed elections were due to electors' "resisting the sentiment of their State." In the Jefferson-Burr case of 1800 the majority electors voted straight as pledged, without specifying President and Vice President separately because the Constitution at that time gave them no right to do that. No elector took it upon himself to break his pledge and vote otherwise than straight Jefferson-and-Burr, even though his doing so would have broken the deadlock and saved all the trouble of a decision in the House of Representatives. It was the House, and not the electoral college, which for a time threatened to "'resist the sentiment" of the whole national majority.

In the Hayes-Tilden contest of 1876 (erroneously printed as 1878) the electors also voted as they were pledged. The question was not about that, but about which electors were the properly chosen set in certain contested States. When this question was decided by a special procedure set up by Congress, the electoral majority went contrary to the popular majority in the country, but that happened also in the election of 1888 when there were no disputed State votes to complicate the result.

CIO's Influence

By Mark Sullivan

Convention Power

ADEQUATE APPRAISAL of the Democratic National Convention and its consequences must wait until its work is fully completed—perhaps until we know what the dissident Democrats in the South and elsewhere, decide to do. Yet at this writing, certain far-reaching aspects of the convention are already clear.

The outstanding aspect of this convention, the most novel and potentially the most pregnant, has been the operation of forces which may suggest a changed pattern of American politics. In this, the most important factor is the part played in the convention by a left-wing labor organization which has gone into politics in a formal and organized way, the CIO Committee for Political Action. If America is to have a labor party such as exists in England, it may turn out that the beginnings of it were laid in this Democratic convention. If the American system is to change so as to consist of one great party that is conservative, the other left-wing and radical—again it may turn out that the lines of the changed pattern were laid down at Chicago in 1944. Whether these things actually eventuate depends on the turns taken in the coming presidential campaign, and the outcome of the election in November.

IT HAS BEEN the frequent observation of newsmen and politicians that the CIO committee and its leader, Mr. Sidney Hillman, has been the most powerful single factor in the convention. Its power did not depend on the number of delegates it directly controlled. There were delegates who are members of CIO, others in whose election CIO had a hand. But the total number of delegates reflecting CIO as such was probably not more than a fifth of the convention.

Neither did CIO's power depend on any threat to bolt the ticket. No such threat was made, and had it been made it would have been ignored. By no possible chance could CIO do other than support the Roosevelt ticket. They have no other place to go. Their very existence as a political force depends on reelection of Mr. Roosevelt. With him elected, and so long as he is President, CIO would be powerful.

CIO had a vital stake in the selection of the vice presidential candidate, because if Mr. Roosevelt should cease to be President, continuation of what CIO stands for would depend on his successor. But CIO was bound to support the ticket for the sake of reelecting Mr. Roosevelt regardless of who the vice presidential candidate might be. They would have been obliged to support the ticket even had the vice presidential candidate been the South Carolina Democrat whom CIO in fact vetoed, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes.

THE POWER of CIO, in the convention and during the campaign, arises from the fact that they have set up a Nation-wide political organization, comparable in size and effectiveness to the national committee of the two great parties. It is a question whether the CIO Political Action Committee is not more fully and effectively manned, and better financed, than the Democratic National Committee itself.

It is the fear of CIO by local Democratic candidates for office throughout the country that gave CIO and Mr. Hillman the power they had in the national convention. Candidates for office and party officials hesitate to offend so powerful an organization.

What now remains is to see what Democratic voters—voters as distinguished from candidates for office and party officials—do about the intrusion of CIO into their party. If they accept the situation and vote for Mr. Roosevelt, and if Mr. Roosevelt is again President, power of CIO is continued. If a sufficient number of Democratic voters refuse to follow this course, the outcome of the election in November will obviously be affected.

Americans Abroad

There must be many, very many, naturalized Americans marooned like myself in foreign lands since 1939, unable to get back to overcome the presumption of loss of nationality that will arise against them on October 14, 1944, at which time section 404 of the Nationality Act of 1940 becomes operative, unless the date is postponed by Act of Congress. I came here in June 1939 to look up African friends and relatives, and, perchance, stumble on some likely material for a book. The war broke up my safari at the Kagera River in September 1939, and I have been here ever since, doing useful work, I trust. It may not be quite impossible for me to return to America before October 1944—but what of those naturalized Americans stalled in countries, enemy and neutral, from which they can't possibly get out till the war ends, and maybe long after that.

There must be some way of calling official attention to this situation.

Yanks Chase Nazis Across Arno River

Push Ahead on 25-Mile Front as Enemy Retreats

Rome, July 20 (AP).—American troops battered their way across the Arno River Valley on a 25-mile front between Pisa and Florence today as German forces retreated across the Arno into the mountain defenses of their Gothic Line.

Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's doughboys held complete controls of hills overlooking the Arno from the south, and American artillery raked the valley in search of Nazi rearguard units protecting the withdrawal of the main body of enemy forces to the north of the stream.

German resistance was confined almost entirely to these small groups armed with automatic weapons. One American column was firmly established on the south bank of the Arno at Pontedera, 12 miles inland from Pisa.

As Clark's armor swept on beyond Livorno in pursuit of the Nazis, American engineers and the 100th Infantry Battalion, composed of Hawaiian-Americans, set about rspairing the shattered harbor. Salvetti, seven miles northeast of Livorno, was in Allied hands.

On the opposite end of the battlefront Polish and Italian troops pushed on beyond the captured port of Ancona, leaving piles of enemy equipment behind. A column sped inland and established a bridgehead over the Esino River, 10 miles west of Ancona.

Despite heavy rains, Allied progress was general across the front. Eighth Army troops fought through Radda, 12 miles north of Siena and 20 miles from Florence, and a battle was in progress for Montevarchi, on the Arno 15 miles northwest of Arezzo.

Allied planes continued their methodical destruction of enemy communications in the Po Valley of northern Italy, flying 1400 sorties. Twenty-five Allied craft were lost and seven Nazi planes were destroyed.

Filipinos' Loyalty Defended

A recent news story charging that most Filipino officials now in the islands are collaborating with the Japanese was described yesterday by Acting Secretary of War Robert F. Patterson as at variance with the known facts and grossly unfair.

Patterson was asked the following questions at his press conference:

"Mr. Secretary, do you care to comment on a recent story in a Washington paper to the effect that all Filipino officials in the Philippines have accepted American defeat in the Philippines as final and are genuinely collaborating with the Japs, and that General MacArthur took President Quezon and Vice President Osmena away from the Philippines for fear that they would play the Japanese game?"

Loyalty Percentage High

The acting secretary answered:

"Yes, I have seen the story. It is not only at variance with known facts, but it would not have been better propaganda for the Japs had they put it out themselves. It tends to create distrust by Filipinos of their own legal government in exile, and it is grossly unfair to two Filipinos whose loyalty to the United States has been demonstrated beyond question.

"I will not attempt to prejudge now, and at this distance, what Filipino officials who accepted office under the Japs are disloyal to the United States, and what ones have taken office for the purpose of helping the Filipino people through trying times, and to keep Japs out of the offices. It is reasonable, however, to assume that the percentage of loyalty to the United States among the officials is approximately what it is among the Filipinos as a whole. There is ample evidence that the loyalty of the Filipino people is something in excess of 95 per cent. Our best information is that the majority of upper level office holders in the Philippines are merely biding their time until our return.

Regrettable Insult

"The insult to the two great Filipinos, President Quezon and Vice President Osmena is most regrettable. They have been the outstanding leaders to their people. It is they who made the decision which committed their people to fight side by side with Americans in defense of our flag and sovereignty. Their loyalty to their people and to this country is unassailable. They have fully shown that by their gallant behavior from the very beginning and by the Filipino troops that fought side by side with the American troops in the great difficulties and terrible ordeals in Bataan and Corregidor."

Bell, 28 Years With Interior, To Leave Post

Dr. William Bonar Bell of 803 Rittenhouse st. nw., chief of the Division of Wildlife Research in the United States Department of the Interior, will retire August 1 after 28 years' service, it was announced yesterday.

"We are reluctant to lose Dr. Bell, commented Dr. Ira N. Grabielson. "He has been a tireless worker. We shall miss him both officially and personally."

He has been assigned in Chicago since July of 1942.

He entered the Bureau of Biological Survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in July, 1916, and rose rapidly to his present post of principal biologist and chief of his division. He is the author of many reports and magazine articles.

Prior to entering the Government's employ, Dr. Bell carried on research at the Smithsonian Table, in Naples, Italy, and organized a campaign for the destruction of ground squirrels in North Dakota.

Born in Milton, Iowa, on June 2, 1877, he was graduated from the Iowa Normal School and from the Iowa State University. He is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of the American Forestry Association, the Washington Academy of Sciences, and two honorary scientific fraternities.

The Junior Bar Section of the D. C. Bar Association has mapped a program for the coming year which includes plans to aid attorneys returning to their law practices from the armed forces, J. Edward Bindeman, newly-elected chairman of the section, announced Wednesday.

Continuation of the monthly luncheon meetings with judges and other civic leaders as guest speakers also was planned, Bindeman said.

Following are new officers:

Bindeman, chairman; Thomas Healy, vice chairman; Nathan Lubar, secretary and treasurer; Samuel Barker, Edward Beard, Eugene Gallagher and Bernard Margolius, executive council.

Housekeeping And Death at Battlefront

By Harold V. Boyle

A Shell Junction at St. Lo, July 19 (Delayed) (AP).—Pvt. Edward Gay of Niagara Falls, N. Y., believes in good housekeeping, even on a battlefield.

Nazi shells and his own buddies are giving him trouble. It is now 2 p. m. and he is sweeping out two little rooms for the third time.

For awhile the building was a command post for one of the forward units, but after it got two glancing hits, the staff pulled back some distance and temporarily set up business in a quiet—well, fairly quiet—French cemetery.

Housekeeper Speaks Up

Just to annoy Gay, Pvt. Henry Luthjens of New Orleans, La., tossed a empty ration box on the floor and Gay explodes.

"After you eat chow put your trash in a box," Gay exclaims.

"You are going to make some lucky girl a nice housewife," says Luthjens, while other soldiers laugh nervously—their minds on those artillery shells whistling past. They are bursting with fearsome bangs a few score yards back along the road Bob Casey, of the Chicago Daily News, ad I ran up a few minutes ago.

The boys call the street corner outside "Shell Junction"—and it's easy to understand why. Across the street one of our vehicles is burning with a flickering orange flame, and 20 feet from the entrance of this small cafe the bodies of a number of American soldiers caught in mortar concentration lie beside a tank destroyer.

Those Annoyinfi Shells

Gay is still wielding the broom and grumbling at his pals.

"I just got this place cleaned up and they dropped a bunch of mortars out in front and dirtied it up again," he says. "It blew all bottles o the shelves and got glass all over my clean floor.

"Then they shot the roof off this another mortar shook plaster all over the place. When they get to the first floor I am going to pack my clothes and get out."

Thesoldiers chuckle, almost reluctantly—all but Lieut. Howard T. Brown, Roswell, N. Mex., leader of a tank destroyer platoon who is standing near the door now during a lull in the fire, looking at one of the bodies, which has two silver bars on the shoulder.

'Captain, My Captain'

"He was my captain," he says. "eH just climbed out for a minute and was looking through field glasses when the mortars hit all over the place. eH was dead before he could moveand so were the three privates who stood near him. Two medics were wounded, too, but they got away."

Brown is still shaken by the loss of hi scommander. It is all he can do to take his eyes away from the body.

Two soldiers agreed that the series of Nazi bombardments laid down in the last 24 hours was the heaviest fire they were under since D-Day.

"We keep hearing that the Germans are supposed to be running short of ammunition," says Luthjens. "I wish some one would tell them, so they would start saving up right now. Oh, oh, here they come again."

Outside shells begin to fall. Bits of plaster shower down from the ceiling. Pvt. Gay sighs and reaches for the broom.

Nazi Booby Traps Wired to Dead Yanks Near St. Lo

American First Army Headquaraers, France, Julyy 20 (U.P.).—A staff sergeant and an enlisted man yesterday gave their officers signed statements that they had found at least three cases in which the Germans had wired booby traps to American dead near St. Lo.

In one case the Germans had attached a wire to the inner seam of a dead man's trousers leading to the explosive charge. The body could not be moved without setting off the charge.

In the other two cases, the wires led from the corpses to stakes attached to the charges.

In World War I, the Germans were accused of booby-trapping dead men and there have been unsubstantiated reports of this practice in the Italian theater, but the present was believed to be the first instance authenticated by affidavits.

Hayden, Harless, Murdock Win Renominations

Phoenix, July 20 (AP).—Arizona's senior U. S. Senator and two Congressmen-at-large, all Democrats, won renomination in Tuesday's party primary with the veteran, 66-year-old Carl Hayden setting the pace with a margin or more than two to one over his nearest opponent in the Senate contest.

With returns complete from 333 precincts and incomplete from 71, Hayden's total stood at 35,516 to 16,761 for Joe Conway, attorney general. Arizona's precincts total 438.

In the congressional race, John R. Murdock had polled 35,576 votes and Richard F. Harless had 32,889. William Petersen, corporation commissioner, trailed with 25,331.

In the Republican gubernatorial contest, Jerrie W. Lee polled 3475 votes to 1352 for Harry F. Michael.

Gov. Sidney P. Osborn, Democrat, was leading the ticket with 41,990 votes against 14,539 for his opponent, William E. Coxon.

Miss Gahagan, Reynolds Talk To Convention

Chicago, July 20 (AP).—Among today's speakers before the great Democratic host in the stadium here were Helen Gahagan Douglas, beautious Hollywood brunette, with a voice trained for the stage and opera, and Quentin Reynolds, who has stramped various parts of the world as a war correspondent.

Miss Gahagan, wife Melvin Douglas, movie star who is in the Army, spoke in her capacity as Democratic National Committeewoman from California. Reynolds appeared as what he termed "a complete amateur in politics." In turn, they labeled the Republican platform "double talk."

Rebuttal for Clare Luce

But it was Reynolds, rather than Miss Gahagan, who seemed to speak in rebuttal to Representative Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut, who told the Republican convention that "G. I. Joe" and his dead brother "G. I. Jim" might have found a better fate if America's leadership had been in other hands.

La Prenza Brands Another 'Munich' Story as 'Unfounde

Buenos Aires, July 20 (U.P.).—The newspaper La Prensa today editorially condemned "unfounded reports" on the establishment of "internaitonal bases" in Brazil and the possibility of a "South American Munich" to appease Argentina at the expense of her weaker neighbors.

Regarding the bases, La Prensa said: "This version, at least, has some antecedents. The idea was in the minds of a subcommittee of the United States House of Representatives but it was not accepted, not even taken into consideration, by either House of Congress, nor by the executive branch of Govern- by public opinion in the United ment. It was severely condemned States and in all the Americas, just as soon as it was announced, and then forgotten, as it deserved."

(Last Monday, Secretary of State Cordell Hull branded as "deliberately false" reports from South America that the United States might recognize the Argentine military government and then let Argentina occupy Uruguay or Chile.)

Ornery Cows

Helena Army Air Field, Ark. (U.P.). An instructor at the air field here just couldn't prove his point that cows on the ground also serve as wind tees. Ordinarily when the wind blows, cows stand with their tails to the wind. But every time he went to give an example, a few queer Arkansas Herefords had to be different and stand cross-wind.

3 Policemen From D. C. in Saipan Fight

Three former Traffic Division policemen took part in the recent attack on Saipan Island, Inspector Milton D. Smith learned this week by V-mail.

The officers, who now wear the uniform of the Marines, are Lieut. Col. John E. Fondahl, Pvt. H. L. Thompson and Pvt. G. W. Rowand.

Colonel Fondahl, a former lieutenant who was the first member of the police force to be called to duty in August, 1940, wrote that both he and Private Thompson are serving with the same outfit and have been on Saipan for almost a month.

"Thompson is our graves registration officer and he has had a rather busy time of it this time," the letter said. Although Colonel Fondahl understood Rowand was on the island with another unit, he hadn't seen him.

FTC Terms The 'Foxhole Pillow' Unsafe

The "foxhole pillow" which has been sold in Washington and New York department stores for $2 to provide comfort for G. I. Joe in a foxhole, is unsafe, according to standards of the Federal Trade Commission.

The "pillow," a kidney beanshaped pallet cased in olive colored waterproofed material, was recommended for carrying in the space between the webbing of soldiers' helmets and their heads.

FTC asserts there is no room for a "foxhole pillow" there, or that if it were placed there it would so elevate the helmet as to expose the neck and lower part of the skull usually protected by the helmet.

The commission has ordered the New York manufacturers which have been featuring the pillows to cease and desist in their advertising.

Department stores here which sold the foxhole pillows maintained some months ago that they had many requests for them by mail from men overseas who had seen the pillows sent other soldiers.

He said he had lived with the GI Joes and th atthey had learned that this is no "foreign war."

"This was no war that any leader of ours had brought us into," he said. "It was a war that was forced upon us."

Referring to the Republican platform as double talk, Reynolds said the men in uniform have become very sensitive to "a commodity which they call bunk."

And he said they know a military and industrial miracle has occurred under the leadership of their Commander in Chief.

Asks Republican Votes

Miss Gahagan made a forthright bid for Republican votes for the Democratic ticket.

She pictured the Democratic Party as "the conservative party," the party which has "conserved hope and ambition in the hearts of our people."

The Republican program, she declared, is "a nightmare of muddle and confusion."

There aren't enough Democrats or Republicans alone to elect a President, Miss Gahagan asserted. She said Republican votes had helped elect Frankin D. Roosevelt three times.

"Never before," she said, "have the people of both parties been so long united on one man. . . . They will elect him again because they know that he has no ambition that is not for all of America."

Marshal Kesselring Decorated by Hitler

London, July 20 (AP).—The Berlin radio said last night Adolph Hitler had personally awarded Marshal Albert Kesselaing, German leader in Italy, the oak leaves with swords and diamonds to the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross, highest German military award.

It was recalled here that Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rundstedt was similarly decorated a few days before he was relieved of his command of the West Front. It was previously rumored that Col. Gen. Eduard Dietl, former chief in Finland, was on his way to replace Kesselring when he was killed in a plane crash.

Robot Bomb Injures Former D. C. Resident

Coast Guard Comdr. Ralph T. Eiland, formerly of 1301 Vermont ave. nw., received 30 wounds when a robot bomb crashed 75 feet from the house in England in which he was staying, but after eight days in a hospital, he has returned to the United States, ready for another assignment of duty.

EILAND

Believed to be the first American casualty of flying bomb attacks to return to this country, Commander Eiland was serving with a Merchant Marine Inspection Unit, when he was injured.

Awakened from sleep by a roaring noise, he ran to the window to close the shutters and saw the bomb strike across the street, shearing off a tree and roaring on into the convent next door, he told Coast Guard headquarters.

Struck by glass and plaster, he collapsed on the floor, later recovering enough to crawl back into his bed.

"I don't know how long I lay there, bleeding all over," he reported, "but the next thing two Army sergeants poked their heads through the side of the room and said, 'No use bothering with that guy—he's dead.' When I half rose on my elbow to protest that I was not, they rushed out to get a stretcher."

At a hospital Commander Eiland was given three blood transfusions and treated for 30 wounds. Wearing the Purple Heart and overseas ribbons, he arrived last week in New York City, where his wife now lives.

Russia Hedges On Quota for World Bank

Copyright New York Tribune, Inc.

Bretton Woods, N. H., July 20.—Russia has again deadlocked the United Nations monetary conference by failing to agree on her quota in the proposed 10 billion dollar bank for reconstruction and development, despite minor concessions in deferring part of her gold payments for five years and the promise of special consideration from the bank in loans to reconstruct war devastated areas, it was learned last night.

The Soviet delegation is asking a quota far below her $1,200,000,000 subscription in the stabilization fund as possible and another "war on nerves" is under way since, with only four more days left for conference business, the Russians have not made their exact quota wants known.

The conference, originally scheduled to end today, has already had a three-day extension through Saturday of this week following a deadlock when the Russians sought a higher quota and reduced gold payments in the stabilization fund.

The United States has taken the position that if any major quota is substantially cut the quotas of other nations should be adjusted downward proportionately. Russia and the other nations, however, are anxious to have the United States investment in the bank as high as possible.

It was stated by reliable sources tonight that if a Russian subscription figure is not agreed upon tomorrow a table of quotas will be submitted to the bank commission for a vote. If approved, this would force Moscow at a later date to take it or leave the figure voted here.

Normandy Worse Than Pacific, Says Veteran of Both Areas

With Americans in France, July 19 (Delayed) (AP).—An officer veteran of Guadalcanal today described the ob of rooting out Germans on Normandy's hedgerow battlefields as far worse than anything he encountered in the Pacific jungles.

The doughboys fighting this battle must edge forward from hedgerow to hedgerow and literally blast the enemy from one foxhole at a time. It's a tortuously slow process.

The officer said that in the jungle both sides were equally handicapped by the wall of undergrowth. Here, however, the German defenders have the advantage because in the jig-saw puzzle of little hedged-in plots every hundred yards or so they have perfect concealment and a perfect field of fire against advancing Americans.

An Infantry Job

The attacking forces are virtually without observation and have little vehicular movability—which means they lack elbow room for tanks. Bulldozers have helped some in plowing up the Nazis, but in general its up to the foot soldiers to go in and dig them out.

Even then, when the Germans lose one hedgerow, they simply fall back into another. The Germans have hundreds of lines of these natural hedgerow defenses extending some 40 miles inland, almost to Rennes.

Normans Started Hedgerows

The Normans began the hedgerows centuries ago to keep their rich black soil from blowing away. The average one is 6 feet thick at the base and from 5 to 8 feet high, tapered off at the top. On the sides and tops are thick tangled growths of scrub oak, cherry trees, wild rose, berry bushes, brambles, hawthorne, privet and boxwood.

On each side of the hedgerow are ditches 6 to 8 feet deep which make natural anti-tank traps.

3 Area Men Win Service Decorations

Three Washington area men, now in the Pacific and European threaters of war, have been decorated for excellent service, it was announced yesterday. The men and their awards are:

First Sergt. Alexis von Bretzel, 28, of 20 Gartrell pl., Kensington, Md., Army Good Conduct Medal for the completion of a year of active duty in "faithful and exact service." The award was made in England. A native of Russia, he came to this country in 1923 and attended St. Lawrence College in Canton, Ohio. His wife and son live in Minneapolis, Minn., and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James J. von Bretzel, at the Kensington address. He has two brothers in the service.

Pfc. Joseph Dyer, 22, the Combat Infantryman Badge for exemplary conduct in combat. A native of Waldorf, Md., Dyer worked for the Safeway Stores before entering the service. He is a veteran of the New Georgia campaign and has served in the Fiji Islands and on Guadalcanal. Before enlisting, he lived with his sister, Mrs. Lillian Murray, at 1325 Tuckerman st. nw., as did two brothers also in the service.

Pfc. Alvin R. Dreas, Route 1, Hyattsville, Md., the Motor Vehicle Driver's Award for an accident-free record in the Pacific. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin C. Dreas, he was employed by the Takoma Park Taxi Co. before entering the service.

Fortress Gunner, Down in Flames, Blows Up Fighter

At a U. S. Flying Fortress Base in Italy, July 19 (Delayed) (AP).—Staff Sergt. Joseph S. Good of Cleveland related today how a tail gunner on a Flying Fortress, falling to the ground in flames while other members of its crew bailed out, kept firing at a German plane until he blew it up.

Good saw the encounter from his craft. The stricken Fortress had been hit by German fighters over Memmingen, Germany.

"A German plane was following him down and he was giving it right back," Goo dsaid. "More than anything in the world he wanted to get that Kraut. They just slugged it out until he blew up that Messerschmitt. A few minutes later the Fortress exploded, too. It was the bravest act I have ever seen."

Good's story went into the official records, with a strong recommendation that the gunner be decorated posthumously.

5th Army Suffered 73,166 Casualties Up to June 12

Fifth Army casualties in Italy from the initial landings last summer through June 12 totaled 73,166, comprising 12,999 killed, 49,561 wounded and 10,606 missing, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson reported yesterday.

The Navy announced that its losses stand at 49,188, swelling total U. S. combat losses to 236,216. Patterson did not tannounce new overall Army casualties. The total was 187,028 through June 20.

Navy casualties, including Marine and Coast Guard personnel, included 20,886 killed, 14,346 wounded, 9477 missing and 4469 prisoners.

WINCHESTER, VIRGINIA

How can the civilians win the peace when the soldiers have won the war?

WALTER Lippmann

in this brilliant, hard-hitting analysis, challenges us to recognize and fulfill our national destiny.

U. S. WAR AIMS

"... remarkable for its hard, almost muscular realism, for its conciseness, and for its sound appreciation of the nature of the world which will emerge from this war ... No profounder statement has been made in this time of American interests, of the dire peril which has confronted us, and the elements of which our future safety must be composed."
—Raymond Swing

"It is a worthy successor to Mr. Lippmann's U. S. FOREIGN POLICY, and should have a profound influence on the character of the postwar organization that is agreed upon by the nations."—H. E. Yarnell, Admiral, U.S.N., Retired.

"The United States is now at the center of the Western World. If we accept the responsibilities which result from this fact, we, with our Allies, can secure a long peace. Otherwise, Western civilization will become a disorganized fringe around the Soviet Union and the rising peoples of Asia.

In 1918 the American peeople allowed the peace to be lost, U. S. WAR AIMS drives home the lesson we must learn before this war is ended. Here, in the opinion of the author, is how we must use the victory we shall win—to ensure the peace we require.

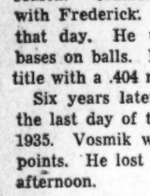
Nats Drop Another to Tigers, This Time, 7-6

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, July 20—Y' know what:

The Detroit Tigers are trying to persuade Doc Cramer to return to pitching after playing the outfield in the majors for 15 years. It was as a pitcher that Connie Mack bought Cramer from the Blue Ridge League in 1929, only to learn later that he had purchased the greatest defensive centerfielder the A's ever had.



POVICH

Cramer doesn't want to pitch despite the pleas of Manager Steve O'Neill who has a pitching shortage. He's 39 and wants to play out the string as an outfielder. "There's no future for me in pitching," he says. "The best thing I ever did as a pitcher was to win the batting championship of the Blue Ridge League—for myself."

When Cramer and Joe Vosmik, of the Nats, encounter each other, they always talk about that 1929 batting championship of the Blue Ridge League. They were tied at .398 on the last day of the season. Cramer was with the Martinsburg Club, and Vosmik with Frederick. Cramer volunteered to pitch against Frederick that day. He used great strategy. He handed Vosmik four bases on balls. Meantime he made four hits himself and won the title with a .404 mark.

Six years later, Vosmik again lost a batting championship on the last day of the season. That was in the American League in 1935. Vosmik went into the last day leading the league by two points. He lost the title to Buddy Myer who made four hits that afternoon.

And Y'Know What

In Chicago on Wednesday night, a new speed champion in the American League is apt to be crowned. That's the night George Case races Thurmond Tucker of the White Sox in a pre-game feature of the war charity program in the White Sox Park. There's a growing doubt that Case can beat Tucker at the 60-yard distance.

The White Sox are betting he can't. Ball players aren't supposed to bet on anything connected with baseball, but the brass hats will turn their heads the other way in a matter like this. It's moderate, anyway, with the teams pooling no more than five bucks per man to back the two fleet outfielders.

Tucker has been aching for another crack at Case ever since Case beat him last year in a 60-yard sprint at Griffith Stadium. Case was barely a foot ahead at the finish. He had to come from behind to overtake Tucker.

The fact is that Case isn't as fast this season as he used to be. His legs and knees have been taking a pounding all season from his his base-stealing attempts. Tucker, or nobody else in the league would be a match for the Case of 1942 or the years before. But on Wednesday night, he's very apt to get licked. We'll see. . . .

Dutch Leonard is rated as a pretty good pitcher, in fact one of the better pitchers in the league, but one club has his number. It's the Detroit Tigers. The records were exhumed today and they revealed the almost incredible fact that Leonard hasn't won a game from Detroit since 1940, either in Detroit or Griffith Stadium.

It isn't all Leonard's fault, though. The other day when he was licked by the Tigers in 10 innings, 2-1, he made three hits himself, scored the onlly Washington run, and was beaten by three consecutive errors in the ninth. Neither of the two runs that licked him were earned. It was the second time this year that Leonard lost a 2-1 game to the Tigers. On the previous occasion, he didn't allow any earned runs, either, yet couldn't win.

The four-minute mile will be run some day when a man is capable of setting himself a pace of 15 miles an hour and maintaining it for the required four minutes. That's what Harry Salsinger of the Detroit News points out by way of reducing stop-watch calculations to an understandable medium.

The Swede, Arne Andersson, who ran the mile in 4:01.6 the other day for a new world record, reeled off the fastest first and second quarters ever recorded in a mile race when he was timed in 56.8 and 60.5 seconds; Salsinger comments. His last two quarters were nearly four seconds slower than the final two quarters of Glenn Cunningham's 4:06.7 mile of a few years ago.

The presumption has been that the four-minute mile would be achieved on a basis of fast first and final quarter miles, but Andersson may confound that theory. He may do it by running the second quarter in faster time than his final quarter, which isn't supposed to be the way to run a 4-minute mile.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 20.—Fears that we (and the British) will be too easy on the Germans, and perhaps the Japs, when the time comes to hit them in the head with a bat at the peace conference table are reasonably well founded, if our conduct toward their athletes during the slap happy days of peace is any criterion.

CONSIDINE

One of this country's sports heroes immediately after World War I was Itchy Kumagae, the tennis player. He was a grinning little Jap with a host of children. He gripped his racquet with what amounts to a super western grip—inflicting considerable topspin on the ball—and ran our best bums close. People—tennis people, at least—thought he was swell.

Max Schmeling got a nice reception and made a fortune here. He was compared favorably to Jack Dempsey, especially in looks. We called him Mox, his own pronunciation of his name, and quoted the rash utterings of his German adviser, Max Machon, as if they were gospel. Looking back on it, Machon was the symbol of a movie-style Nazi. After Hitler came into power he actually brought a brown shirt to the United States but, as I said, we took him seriously. He later turned out to be a burning Nazi zealot, and could easily have been a spy. He was just as popular in England, as was Schmeling.

Max, according to Pierre Huss, ins correspondent in Berlin for a long time, had hopes of coming back here as late as 941—after the Luftwaffe had begun the air war by wiping out Warsaw, Rotterdam an da lot of London—and parachuting down on LaGuardia Field to begin training for a fight. He was that sure of a nice reception, knowing our sucker quotient.

In 1932 at the winter olympics at Lake Placid there was considerable and generally laudatory comment on the "courage" of the German and Japanese bob-cledding teams. The Germans, several of them young Junkers, sneeringly refused to listen to the proferred advice of American bob-sledders who knew the course, and paid for their arrogant attitude with their lives.

Japs, at the same winter sports show,charged down the towering ski slide with little or no previous training, and took a terrible physical beating. But they hung in there, fighting for a place in the scoring, and received much favorable comment for their guts—though, in the light of what has since happened, they were plainly afraid of losing face.

Earlier, the Japanese Davis Cup team, playing at the swank Chevy Chase Club in Washington, elicited considerable applause for its fine stand. A little later, several Japanese professional golfers toured the circuit and large crowds followed them, eager to give them a hand bcause they were foreign and not especially good.

After the 1934 baseball season a team of big league ball players toured Japan and were showered with presents, polite applause and Geisha girls ,all of which aroused interest back here. That the fairly influential Jap who sponsored the tour—done at a time when their high command might well have been plotting the attack on Pearl Harbor—was shortly thereafter found in a gutter with a bullet through his skull, seemed to make no difference to us. His crime, so far as the high command was concerned, was that he had shown excess courtesy to our blokes.

The Nazis used the 1936 olympics as bludgeon to show how tough they were, or were going to be. There were more Storm Troopers there than athletes. Th Grman popl showd up at th olympic stadium bcause they were instructed to show up, and whenever the Americans were alone—without witnesses—they were pushed around.

We beat them, with the aid of Jesse Ownes, the gerat Negro runner and jumper, whom Hitler refused to congratulate. But when the thing was over the Nazis announced that Germany had won the games. They gained their margin by strange victories, one of which was their undisputed first place in olympic stadium building. It didn't matter that no other nation, naturally, entered a stadium in

Tony Shucco Starts Drills Here Today

Tony Shucco arrives in the city today for final drills before facing Georgie Parks at Griffith Stadium Monday night, in the first heavyweight fight here this season.

Accompanying the Boston Italian will be his manager, James Joy Johnston, who last night gave Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez an option on Shucco's services for two more encounters here if he eliminates Parks as a contender.

Anxious to create a lively heavyweight market here, Turner and Menendez are going all-out to line up outstanding big fellows for the balance of the season. Nate Wolfson, who handles Joe Baksi, wired them yesterday that he would be anxious to send the Pennsylvania star against the Parks-Shucco winner, following Baksi's bout with Lee Savold, set in Chicago August 7.

Bettina May Meet Victor

Melio Bettina has agreed to meet Monday's victor, and Turner and Menendez will be interested in snaring Baksi to face the ultimate winner here late in August or the fore part of September.

Shuco remains a slight betting favorite from the standpoint of experience. Johnston claims the Bostonian is the best boxer among all the big fellows ow, maintaining that he actually is a superior boxer to Billy Conn. The veteran pilot is convinced Shucco can stop Parks—and he is aiming at big action here as a result of such a victory.

Parks has many supporters here. The District youngster is a terrific puncher, and many are convinced he can knock out any number of prominet heavyweights. They are especially strong on him since his great spurt of three successive knockouts in Chicago—over Nate Bolden, Wallace Cross and Johnny Tuck. They feel that the 190-pound Parks has found himself with this string of triumphs, and therefore will continue to punch his way right to the top of the division.

Bosox Lace Chisox, 11 to 7

Chicago, July 20 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox became the first major league club to win the season's series from another today when they made it 12 victories in 13 games with the White Sox by taking a free-hitting game, 11 to 7. They were outhit by the Chicagoans, however, 16 to 14.

With Bobby Doerr and Bob Johnson each singling in two runs and Tom McBride driving in two more with a double, the Bostonians knocked out Jake Wade for a 6-0 lead in the first two innings. The White Sox, led by Ed Carnett and Roy Schalk, with three hits each, started hammering back until Clem Hausmann had to be called to save Francis "Red" Barrett's fourth victory.

Joe Haynes and Gordon Maltzberger succeeded Wade. Doerr made two hits in five trips to raise his league-leading average to .338, while Pete Fox, the former leader, finally snapped a slump that saw him go hitless 12 straight times with a three-run triple off Maltzberger in the eighth inning.

Town Hall Wins Hagerstown Race

Hagerstown, Md., July 20 (AP).—G. C. Smith's Town Hall, with Jockey W. Kirk in the saddle, easily won the Sharpsburg Purse, sixth and feature race at the Fairgrounds today.

Breaking from No. 1 position, Town Hall was fifth, but he moved rapidly forward to take over the lead in the stretch and breeze in under the wire a winner by four lengths. The Smith entry returned $4.30.

Mack's Miss came up fast to take second place and White Easter finished in show position.

The Rogers entry, Gino Gold, in the first with Free Born in the second returned a daily double of $150.10.

Cards Seeking New Baseball Talent

St. Louis, July 20 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals are beating the bushes in search of new baseball talent.

Tomorrow and Saturday, three Cardinal scouts will look the field over at a try-out camp set up in Waterloo, Ioaw; next week two-day camps will be held at Austin and Ovatouna, Minn.

Baseball aspirants who are 16 years of age or older are invited to bring their own equipment and show the scouts how good they are.

Cards Down Giants Twice, 10-2 and 6-2

New York, July 20 (AP).—The league-leading St. Louis Cardinals increased their lead over the second-place Cincinnati Reds to 13 games, their highest of the season, byby taking both ends of a double-header from the New York Giants, 10-2 and 6-2, today, before 18,824 paid admissions.

The Redbirds collected an even dozen hits off Jack Brewern, Ewald Pyle and Andy Hansen in the opener to make it easy for Mort Cooper to register his eleventh victory of the season. Walker Cooper, card catcher, and Buddy Kerr of the Giants hit homers. St. Louis' big inning was the third, when six hits chased Brewer and scored five runs.

In the nightcap the Cards got off to a two-run lead on a triple by Stan Musial, a single by Ray Sanders and a walk to Johnny Hopp at the expense of Rube Fischer. The Giants tied it in the seventh on Kerr's second homer with one on.

Six hits in the eleventh inning gave St. Louis four runs and the game, for Ted Wilks' seventh victory against one defeat.

Tribe Edges A's, 2-1, for 3d Straight

Cleveland, July 20 (AP).—Steve Gromek hurled the Cleveland Indians to thei rthird straight triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics today, the Tribe winning 2 to 1 on the strength of Roy Cullenbine's double.

The two Cleveland runs came in the seventh inning, when Manager Lou Boudreau walked, Cullenbine doubled, and the boy manager beat a throw to the plate on Ken Keltner's grounder. Cullenbine scored when Buddy Rosar forced Keltner at second. The Aethletics tallied in the fourth, Frank Hayes crossing the plate after his own double and Dick Siebert's single.

Luman Harris was charged with the loss. He gave the Indians seven hits in as many innings before being relieved by Jonas Berry. Gromek allowed five hits in winning.

Plebe Nine To Meet H. & S. Saturday

Annapolis, Md., July 20 (AP).—Max Bishop, Navy baseball coach, said today that Andrew Frahler, promising Plebe player, probably would start on the mound Saturday when the Middies meet Hampden-Sydney College here to inaugurate Navy's ambitious summer sports schedule.

Bishop will depend upon Plebes for the first four or five games of the 14-game summer schedule until the upper classmen return from cruise and summer leave around August 9.

"Of course we don't know how the Plebes will react under pressure but I have at least five good prospects in the lot who should make the varsity," Bishop said.

Besides Frahler, whom the coach said undoubtedly would be a varsity outfielder, they are R. W. Hill and R. C. Bryan, second baseman; Jack Pickens, second base or short stop, and Bob Ellsworth, outfielder.

Ellsworth, however, probably will go out for football, Bishop said.

The best Plebes will be retained with the upper classmen on Bishop's team and the remaining first-year men will make up the Plebe team under the guidance of Plebe coach Keith Molesworth.

New Havən, Conn.—Holder of three world's shooting records, Ed Doyle, former Marine Corps crack shot "lines in the sights" of Winchester carbines before they leave the New Haven plant for the fighting fronts. Doyle, who has "targeted" 75,000 carbines, must get every shot into a 5-inch bull's eye at 100 yards before the gun is accepted. Doyle's triple shooting record, made while he was a 22-year-old Leatherneck sergeant, was established in 1923 when he won the Swiss match event with 201 straight bull's eyes in a 16-inch target on a 500-yard rappe.. Doyle also was a member of the Marine squad that won the national team match at Camp Perry, Ohio, in 1922.

Pirates Beat Phillies, 4-1; Then Bow, 3-2

Philadelphia, July 20 (AP).—The Phillies won the second game of a swing shift doubleheader, 3 to 2, today on Ford Mullen's eleventh-inning single with the bases loaded, after losing the first game 4 to 1 before a crowd of 7309.

Pittsburgh's Frankie Zak was the standout of both games. He drove the final two runs over the plate with a triple in the opener and started three double plays that saved the day for pitcher Ray Starr. In the afterpiece Zak's double started the Pirates hot after Dick Barrett, who until then held an edge over Rip Sewell in a pitching duel.

The Pirates won the opener when they hoped on Big Bill Lee for two runs apiece in the third and fourth innings. Buster Adams hit a homer fo rthe Phillies in the second game. Pirate Manager Frankie Frisch was ejected from the field, also in the second, for protesting a called ball.

Free Lance Jamaica Winner

Choice Beats Bel Reigh by Neck Margin

Jamaica Racetrack, N. Y., July 20 (AP).—Only four horses competed in the featured Riverside (Class C) Handicap for 3-year-olds here today but it resulted in a thrilling contest. Mrs. H. C. Philips' Free Lance eked out a neck decision over Mrs. Tilyou Christopher's Bel Reigh, while Johns Dear, from the Lazy F Ranch, wound up a scant half length farther away, three lengths in front of C. T. Chenery's Cattachiptico.

The talent proved eminently correct, for the quartet finished exactly as the betting would indicate. Free Lance, with a recent overnight handicap victory to recommend him, was a $4.10 choice over Bel Reigh, whose last outing saw him third in the Yankee Handicap at Suffolk Downs. The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:45 1-5.

The victor was topweighted under 122 pounds and ridden by Veteran Jimmy Stout.

Bel Reigh, as is his wont, showed the way for most of the journey, with Eddie Arcaro rating him along in quest of his third score on the card. Johns Dear and Cattachiptico were in front of Free Lance as they swung around the first turn. Stout urged Free Lance into third position midway of the backstretch and into the runnerup spot at the far turn. He went to the whip entering the front lane. The Phipps' cold drew alongside the tiring Bel Reigh a furlong from home, then outlasted that fellow to the wire.

Attendance today was 19,897.

the proceedings. But we laughted at the absurdity of it all. I guess the British did, too.

When Schmeling came back here to tune up for the second fight against Joe Louis he was so thoroughly Nazi that Hans Dieckhoff, Hitler's Ambassador to this country, travelled from Washington to visit him in his dressing room at Madison Square Garden in New York the night he fought Harry Thomas. I happened to be there at the time. They—representatives of a group which had slaughtered Jews, Catholics and other minorities—conversed for a long time in German. When the Ambassador and his shaven-headed aide left, the aide turned at the door, clicked his heels, and gave Max the Nazi salute. Max went out, kayoed Thomas, and the fans lifted the roof with their cheers.

Big cheers also greeted the Jap pole vaulter Sueo Ohe of Keio University, when he came here for the wintertrackand field sason in 1937-1938. He must even then have been connected with the Jap army for he wound up as an officer on Bataan, leading Jap troops against our malaria-infested and starving men, and was shot through the tripes while leading a charge.

Baron Von Cramm, wowed them at Forest Hills and Wimbledon in his tennis matches against Don Budge. His classic strokes brought down the house and he was royally entertained.

We're suckers for a foreign athlete, potential enemy or not, because we're fundamentally sports-loving and rule-observing and refuse to ascribe any National viciousness to the muscular visitors—provided they can hit a ball or throw a punch pretty much as we ourselves do.

For heaven's sake, let's grow up.

GOODBYE, JACK. HELLO, WALLY. After a tour of duty of many moths at El Patio, Little Jack Little will close tomorrow night for a few weeks' vacation—probably topped off by an appearance at Loew's State Theater in New York and the official debut of his new song, "Thanks for the Dream," which bears all the stigmata of hit. Jack will return to El Patio this fall. . . . Wally Taylor, always a tricky one with accordion and piano, will bring his trio into the spot on Monday.

CLIPPER TO STAGE REVUES. Now that the China Clipper is freshly air conditioned, Owner Sam Wong is planning to launch it into show business. Floor shows with oodles of dancing pretties, comedians, magicians and all the rest, will soon cavort in the Clipper's Cabin Room. More details later.

The 1203 Club, fresh and nifty in blue and white, will open tomorrow night on the second floor of 1203 Pennsylvania ave. It's the newest project of Willie Biron. (Sure, you remember Willie from Paul Young's.) Cocktails and entertainment, both potent.

A CABALLERO DE LUXE is Sotero San Miguel of Old Mexico, now in the Windsor Room. Sotero's wardrobe leaves one bewitched, bedazzled and bewildered. His white sombrero encrusted with gold and about as big as an umbrella cost 500 pesos in Mexico City. (Which makes Johns Frederics chapeaus seem like Woolworth jobs.) Equally magnificent is his gold-braided brown suede suit. And you should see his zapatos (shoes to you). They're of brown and cream calf hide with the hair left on . . . We should mention that Sotero sings a nice song, too, accompan

The Gallup Poll

Growing Desire for 2-Party System Indicated in South

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 20.—Southern threats of revolt against Roosevelt undoubtedly stem from a widespread feeling among Southerners that their section would be better off with two strong parties instead of the present one-party system.

That sentiment is increasing. A special survey throughout the South shows that more than six out of every 10 voters with opinions are convinced that the South would benefit by an effective two-party system.

The growth of this idea in the minds of Southern voters is shown in the following trend, based on institute surveys:

"Do you think the South would be better off, in general, if there were two political parties of about equal strength instead of one strong party as there is at present?"

	Yes	No
1939	57%	43%
1943	59	41
Today	64	36

In the latest survey approximately one in five expressed no opinion.

While there is every evidence that the majority of Southern States as usual will cast their ballots for the Democratic ticket in November, many Southern leaders feel that the South would get far more attention from Washington, and have a far greater say in the councils of the Democratic Party, if it were less solidly Democratic on election day.

As might be expected, sentiment in favor of a two-party system is strongest in the less solidly Democratic parts of the South, such as North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky, Oklahoma and Tennessee. In short, the more taste a Southern State has of an effective two-party system, the more it likes that system.

But if a permanent two-party system were to develop in the South, the second party would undoubtedly have to carry some other label besides "Republican." Rather than vote Republican—a symbol associated with bad feelings generated in the War Between the States—Southern Democrats would prefer to see a new party formed out of the conservative wing of the present Democratic Party.

As long ago as 1936 an institute poll found that nearly half of all Southern voters said that if there were only two political parties in this country—one for conservatives and one for liberals—they would join with the conservatives.

When a poll tested Southern reaction to various possible names for a new conservative party it was found that "Southern Democratic Party" was the preferred name. Other popular names were "Jeffersonian Party" and "Independent Democratic Party of the South."

'Bazooka Man' Col. Skinner On Way to California Tech To Direct Special Studies

THE "BAZOOKA MAN:" Off to Pasadena, Calif., to direct special studies in swift projectiles at California Technical Institute is Col. Leslie A. Skinner of the Ordnance Department . . . He's the father of the "bazooka" (no, not the Bob Burns kind), and the "rockets" which have been playing such havoc with our enemies on the fighting front.

Some day the full story may be written about the devious hardships and discouragements Colonel Skinner faced in developing his brain-children . . . First experiments on the "bzaooka" were conducted by him 12 years ago in a workshop set up at home when he was stationed at Fort Aberdeen, Md.

His wife refused to allow him to store explosives in the house. He buried his deadly mixtures in fruit jars, out in the yard . . . Like many other inventors whose findings have later proved among the most valuable in our wartime setup, Colonel Skinner had great difficulty in selling his idea . . . A book could, and should, be written about the innumerable disheartening interviews he had with higherups in the Army, the delays encountered in developing the instruments that have since proved so effective . . . A les persistent man than Colonel Skinner would have abandoned his projects long before they reached completion; a less determined one would have lost faith in them.

After the Ordnance Department finally became interested in Colonel Skinner's designs and developments, other technical officers were assigned with Colonel Skinner toward perfecting his projects . . . Last year he went to England on a three months' detail to exchange views and findings with the "rocket men" in the British armed forces . . . The rockets used by the B-29s attacking Japan not long ago were developed from a design orginating with Colonel Skinner . . . In his leisure time he does spectacular oil paintings in the modern manner . . . He's the son of a famed Army surgeon, now retired, who makes his home in Berkeley, Calif., and he and Mrs. Skinner have two children—a daughter, Leslie, who is spending the summer with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Larry King, in Charles, Ill., and Breck, a son, who is studying in a military academy in Virginia.

NAVAL NOTE: A lieutenant from the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda was telling a tea-time gathering the other day that he heard—positively, with his own ears—one skeleton there muttering to the one hanging next to him . . . The lieutenant drew closer, he said, just in time to catch this skeleton statement, "Say, if we had any guts at all, we'd find a way out of this joint."

DOUGLAS DATA: It's not just by accident that Justice William O. Douglas, one of the many men discussed for the Vice Presidency, is now on a pack-train trip in the mountains of Oregon and can't be reached by telephone . . . Mrs. Douglas would far rather have her husband stay in the Supreme Court than to have any other office you might mention . . . She's the one who picked this time for the pack trip. If, by chance, her husband should be nominated at Chicago, he won't find out about it until Saturday, when he and his family return to their Oregon mountain home . . . The latter, incidentally, was built by the justice himself on the very spot where he and his wife spent their honeymoon in 1923.

"FOR THE MILLIONS:" England's Number One Woman—in the field of electrical engineering, anyway—arrived in Washington yesterday for a brief visit. She is Miss Caroline Haslett, adviser to the British Ministry of Labor on women's training, and her slogan is "Electricity for the Millions." . . . She came to this country to address women's groups and to inspect the Tennessee Valley Authority's promotion of the use of electricity in the homes. . . . Miss Haslett's hope is that in the postwar world low-cost refrigerators, washing machines and heating appliances will be available to all housewives. . . . Incidentally, Miss Haslett says her chief inspiration as an engineer is Dr. Lillian Gilbreth of this country, who first applied engineering aid to the housewife's routine.

FROM CHICAGO: My special convention spy reports that the Democrats have already outdone the Republicans on the social front . . . Whereas the latter were content with only four or five big league dinners, teas and luncheons during their conclave, the Democrats are entertaining right and left . . . A number of fetes are swirling around the popular Joseph Caseys, who are staying at the Drake, where Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. William H. Davis, Breckinridge Long and Mrs. Charles Bromwell also are registered . . . Opening night of the convention found the Caseys in Mrs. Philip Wrigley's box at the stadium. In an adjoining box were Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas and four guests . . . Mrs. James A. Farley had guests in her box, all going on later to Mrs. Perle Mesta's suite at the Blackstone for a late supper.

COMMISSIONED an ensign in the Spars last week at New London, Conn., was Karla Louise Yepsen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Yepsen, Washington. She enlisted in the Coast Guard here in 1943 and began active duty at the Coast Guard Palm Beach training station

Postwar Leisure

(How to guarantee yourself a rest when peace comes:)

When answering an office telephone, see that the conversation takes as little as possible out of you, as:

"Is Mr. X in?"
"No, he isn't."
"Will he be in soon?"
"I couldn't say."
"Will he ever be in?"
"I wouldn't know."
Is there anyone there who knows anything?"
"I really couldn't say—that's not in this department."

When selling anything behind a counter, be cagey and noncommittal and be sure to put a persistent customer in her place as:

"I want to see some green satin backed ribbon——"
"We don't have any."
"When do you expect any in?"
"I wouldn't know."
"Do you think you will ever have any in?"
"I haven't the slightest idea. Don't you know there's a war on?"

If working in a restaurant, conserve your voice and your steps, as:

"I'll take the spare ribs——"
"That's off the menu now."
"Then I'll take the spaghetti and cheese——"
"That's off too."
"Is the kidney stew still on the menu?"
"I guess so."
"I'll take that and the stringless green beans——"
"They're off the menu now."
"Do you have any green vegetables?"
"Everything we have's on the menu."

When selling another woman anything to wear, be as self-engrossed as possible as:

"I suppose, of course, the cotton blouse would launder better than the rayon?"
"We never guarantee blouses."
"Do you think the rayon would shrink very much-"
"I couldn't say."
"I'm wondering if the long-sleeved cottons will be worn again next spring."
(No answer).
"What kind of cotton goods is this?"
"I wouldn't know."
"Which of the two is the better-made blouse?"
"They're both all right."
"Well, which do you think looks better on me?.'
"That's for you to say."

When carrying out dishes in a restaurant, annoy the patrons as much as possible. Either procrastinate in removing the dirty dishes of their predecessors, or contantly interrupt their eating and conversation to grab half-finished salads and desserts, water glasses or cutlery away from them so you can get them out of the place and wind up your work.

When answering a telephone on a large switchboard, mumble rapidly in an anemic and bored manner the name of your organization. If asked to repeat, mumble it louder and more rapidly.

If employed in a private home, constantly brood about your lot and think of the big money you could be making somewhere else. Sulk, pout, rattle the dishes, slam the pans and keep the members of the household walking on eggs. Do everything as sloppily as possible because they won't dare fire you and because you know you could get a better job if they did.

If dealing in anything almost impossible to obtain now, as apartments, electric goods, cleansing tissue, etc. don't wear yourself out being civil in your refusals. In answer to requests by persons merely glare and shake your head. In answer to telephone calls, merely hang up.

If employed on any kind of an information desk, mutter in reply to all inquiries: "Gjowkxst vrewtzyp abxpquzmrkzxnysky."

(From The Truthtown Torch

Truthtown women, noted for their beautiful jewels, are alarmed over the report that synthetic sapphires and rubies as beautiful as the real gems will be available at the price of a few cents in the postwar world. A quickly organized committee, headed by Mrs. Lucius Gilderlyly, has called a meeting for tomorrow in the Bijou Room of the Hotel Swank to "take measures."

"It is high time some curb were put on postwar inventions," Mrs. Gilderlyly told the Torch last night. "The jewel investments of the people who are the backbone of this Nation should be protected. It was bad enough when fur coats became available to the mob. All of us had to take a depreciation in our minks and chinchillas. But this jewel business is going too far. Aside from its economic effect it will put dangerous ideas in the heads of a great many people."

Mrs. Gilderlyly said her committee might appeal to Congress to prohibit the making after the war of synthetic white sapphires now used in war instruments. These are being produced at about 2½ cents a carat. Synthetic rubies are being made at 5 cents a carat. Both are said to be as hard as the natural gems.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 16, Self-Possessed and Accomplished, Has Never Had a Beau and Doesn't Want One; Her Friends Call Her Queer; Isn't This Rude?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 16 years old. I will be in the fourth year of high school this fall. I have never gone with a boy in my life and I never want to. It is not because I am shy, as I get along very well with people. I like to read good books, play tennis and golf, and swim. I am told that I am a good conservationalist. I think there are so many things in life more worthwhile than going with boys, necking and petting. I never want to get married, either.

This is my problem: My girl friends in high school used to be pals with me. We got along swell. But recently they are treating me as if I were a child. They say, "Oh, she wouldn't know," when we are talking and the conversation gets around to boys. Do you think it is nice of them to call me peculiar just because I am not boy crazy?

E. L. D.

'Roughest Courage' Is Coin of Friends

DEAR E. L. D.: There is no denying that it's rude of your friends to call you peculiar to your face. But on the other hand, the very candor of their criticism combined with their willingness to accept you as one of the group on special terms, proves that they are your friends. The great essayist Ralph Waldo Emerson writes that "roughest courage," not "dainty handling," is the coin of true friendship; and says: "Better be a nettle in the side of your friend than his echo."

However, speaking of your friends' rude treatment of you,—What could be ruder than your belligerently scornful attitude toward their lively interest in boys, a perfectly natural manifestation of wholesome social development in girls their age? And what more unkind and unjust than your hasty condemnation of the opposite sex Indeed, your viewpoint is most peculiar; and I hope for your sake it is simply a pose and not an honest expression of unnatural feeling.

How Did Girl Get This Way?

READING your letter, it seems to me, the big question is "How did you get this way?" And the problem, "How to overcome the handicap of frightened prudery that somebody, unfortunately, has foisted on you?" In all probability, you are dutifully sounding off a touch-me-out, "nasty mans" reaction to boys that has been drilled into you for years by adult members of your household who don't know the first principles of normal social psychology as applied to children and adolescents; and who tried to compensate for their ignorant inability to teach the facts of life in a constructive way by encouraging you to despise the opposite sex—thinking thus to insulate you against the tests and challenges of normal growth. This would amount to blocking your emotional development at little-girl level—to about what would be normal at the age of 10, when it is natural for each sex to regard the other, of contemporary age, with casual hostility.

This brand of hostility is not appropriate to your present age, and your friends do you a service in empahisizing that fact. It is time to put aside this unnatural, unbecoming, ungracious antagonism toward boys; and to begin taking a genuinely friendly and intelligent interest in their existence generally, and as individuals. As a good conversationalist who likes good books, and who is skilled at tennis, golf and swimming, you have the accomplishments to be "a man's woman;" and unless you were born a freak of nature, you are cheating yourself out of much happiness and made-to-order companionship in stiffly refusing to promote friendships with boys.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

CHICAGO.—Politics is a succession of contrasts. Here are two.

Scene 1—The Congress Hall Hotel in Chicago during the Democratic Convention in 1932.

Louey Howe is lying stretched full length on the floor of his room, his collar open, belt unbuckled, an electric fan focused on him. He's gasping for breath. Beside him is a direct telephone line to Hyde Park. Louey is about to achieve his life's ambition—nominate for President the man he has served and trained.

In another hotel room down Michigan blvd., Sam Rayburn of Texas is leading the forces of Speaker Jack Garner. Roosevelt is ahead in the balloting, but Jim Farley, in command of the Roosevelt forces, has just reported that they are ready to bolt. He can't hold the Roosevelt delegates beyond another vote. He has to make a deal.

Farley, with Jimmy Byrnes of South Carolina, Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania and Dave Lawrence of Pennsylvania, come into Louey Howe's room to report. Finally, Farley asks the others to go out, says he wants to speak to Louey alone.

"I've got to keep away from Burt Wheeler," he tells Louey. "The boss won't take him."

Senator Wheeler has toured the Northwest, expecting to be the vice presidential candidate on a Roosevelt ticket. But on the private wire to Hyde Park, a compromise is now arranged whereby Jack Garner, not Wheeler, becomes Roosevelt's running mate in return for the votes of the Texas-California delegates.

Scene 2—Chicago, 1944. Louey Howe is dead. Burt Wheeler, who finally discovered that Roosevelt didn't like him, has turned morose, sour, embittered. Jim Farley, who wanted to be Vice President himself in 1940, is FDR's most active political enemy. Jimmy Byrnes now has had his own lightning rod up for Vice President. Joe Guffey has not changed a bit. And this time, instead of fighting for delegates, FDR has accepted the nomination in advance.

That is how politics changes.

Soldier Candidates For Congress

DEMOCRATIC BIGWIGS in Chicago hold mixed views about the effectiveness of soldier candidates for Congress. Some soldier campaigns have clicked, others have not. Lieut. Will Rogers, jr., in 1942 was elected to Congress from California, but recently Lieut. James Tucker, who ran for the Senate against Homer Capehart in the GOP Indiana primary, lost.

The politicos are especially watching one primary—that in Texas on Saturday—which should be a straight-across-the-boards test of a soldier candidate. It is between Congressman Richard Kleberg, part owner of the 1,250,000-acre King Ranch, and Capt. John E. Lyle, a veteran of North Africa and Italy.

The test is especially clear cut because Congressman Kleberg did not serve in the last war and his son received a deferment as a farmer in this war, though he was trained in a military school.

Democratic Senate?

Political prognosticators at Chicago have been checking over Roosevelt's chances of having a Democratic Congress if he is elected next November. While no one is predicting yet about the House, Democratic leaders feel certain of a favorable Senate.

For instance, the White House has received reports that, in Connecticut, Republican Senator Danaher will be replaced by a hard-hitting new Democrat, Brien McMahon, former United States Assistant Attorney General and the man who waded into bloody Harlan County, Ky., to clean up the murder tactics used against coal miners. McMahon also is the one man since Civil War days who secured a conviction for slavery. He jailed an Arkansas sheriff who held 12 Negroes as slaves.

In North Dakota also, Democrats are counting on defeating Senator Gerald Nye with popular Gov. John Moses, three times Governor of the State.

The White House will push the Connecticut and North Dakota campaigns vigorously.

MAYOR ED KELLY really rolled out the red carpet for the Democrats. He scheduled entertainments, dinners, parties, dances, has been running buses from all the hotels to and from the convention, with special buses carrying Democrats to the Stadium. (Rather different from what he did for the Reps . . . Hollywood talent, which steered clear of the Republican gathering, turned out in force for the Democratic show . . . Organized labor representatives have been more in evidence at this convention than at any in history, with CIO Political Action Committee members in the vanguard . . . Chicago Sewer Commissioner Tom Gery vigorously denies having turned on the steam heat during the GOP convention to make his political opponents perspire, but admits he's gotten lots of nasty Republican mail, anyhow . . . Boss Kelly denies that his State has ever taken a penny from the Democratic National Committee, says that, on the contrary, it has donated about a quarter million to the Democratic war chest . . .

One newsman, remembering difficulties in getting elevators to stop in the Stevens Hotel during the Republican Convention, sent a wire to the Democratic National Committee reserving an elevator for 12:30 noon on the second day of the convention . . . Charlie Michelson, the Democratic Party "ghost," has been here breaking in his vigorous young successor, Paul Porter, newest Roosevelt tub-trumper . . . Senator Barkley's backers now wish he had never made that anti-FDR speech opposing the veto of the tax bill . . . They're afraid every Republican campaigner will read it over and over again.

SIGNIFICANT SCENE: Former Justice Byrnes of South Carolina, Mayor Kelly of Chicago, Boss Hague of New Jersey, enter Blackstone Hotel, get into elevator. Jim Farley is standing in the lobby. Mayor Kelly gives him the nod. Farley steps into the elevator. Later, word is passed out that Farley is for Byrnes . . . Columbia Broadcasting scored a unique news beat and the Democrats scored a lambasting from other networks when John Daly sneaked a microphone under his coat into the Sam Jackson press conference. Just as Jackson began reading the historic Wallace letter, Daly held his microphone in the air, recorded the whole thing for Columbia listeners . . . Groundwork for the Jimmy Byrnes boom was laid by Bob Hannegan and Leo Crowley on the train from Washington to Chicago. Hannegan and Crowley, both Catholics, locked themselves in a compartment with Byrnes to discuss Byrnes' greatest stumbling block—how to get over his change of religion . . . Remarked New York Times news sleuth Turner Catledge on reading the FDR-Wallace letter: "That's the first time I've seen anyone cut a man's throat below the belt" . . . Senator Sam Jackson of Indiana, hitherto unknown, has turned out to be one of the outstanding figures at this convention. A great speaker, broad-gauged of intellect, Jackson has kept things on the beam.

Carolinas Leaf Growers Seek Higher Ceilings

Charlotte, N. C., July 20 (AP).—Carolinas tobacco growers, in simultaneous meetings yesterday in Raleigh, N. C., and Florence, S. C., demanded immediate and acceptable ceiling prices for their crop and protested proposed reductions in sales hours on auction markets.

In a resolution adopted at a meeting called by the sales committee of the North Carolina Farm Bureau, the tobacconists declared at Raleigh they would join South Carolina and other States in asking for a five-day sales holiday at the beginning of auctioning if ceilings were not satisfactory.
